Olympic boycott crumbling

Decision within month if Canada to compete

Times News Services

There are growing signs that plans for a worldwide boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games are crumbling and the United States could be the only major sporting power absent when the Olympic flame is lit July 19.

A survey by United Press International of political and sporting attitudes among the most important countries showed Tuesday that none was at the point of joining a boycott.

And for the first time there were indications that American public opinion, originally solid in support of President Jimmy Carter's boycott call, was cooling to the idea.

Several countries have rallied to Carter's call, but major Western powers including Canada, West Germany, France, Britain, Japan and Australia are either starting to lean away from a boycott or simply unable to force their athletes to stay away.

Canadian External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said Tuesday the federal government will make its final decision before the end of this month.

Following a meeting with Sports Minister Gerald Regan and Dick Pound of the Canadian Olympic Association, MacGuigan said the sports body has left the ultimate decision in the hands of the government.

"We are only interested in participating in a boycott if that can drastically counter the affects of the naked Soviet agression in Afghanistan," Regan said.

Pound said that if the government found enough support from other participating Western nations that favored a boycott and decided to bar Canadian athletes from competing, his group would reconsider its stand and make its final decision at its next general meeting in Montreal April 27.

The COA's chief source of funding, the Olympic Trust of Canada, is still undecided about what it will do but at a meeting Tuesday night in Toronto indicated it would follow the government line.

"If the government told the COA 'You don't go,' and if the general public's opinion was, 'You don't go,' then it would be difficult for us to spend these funds ($1.6 million) on sending an Olympic team to Moscow," said Olympic Trust president Wally Halder.

The board of directors of Olympic Trust Tuesday reconfirmed its position of March 26 — that it is opposed to sending a team "under present international circumstances."

There are three main factors in the boycott movement's international erosion:

—Growing opposition among athletes;

—The virtual collapse of plans for so-called alternative games;

—Last week's crucial decision by the British Olympic Association to defy the government and send a team to Moscow. That decision could prove a turning point.

Shortly after it was made, the Norwegian Olympic Committee reversed its previous position and voted narrowly to go.

In the U.S. itself, the first signs of a swing away from Carter's position came when the U.S. Olympic Committee disclosed Monday that 80 per cent of letters and telegrams it was receiving now opposed a boycott.

USOC sources also said that at a private meeting last weekend in Colorado Springs, Colo., 20 of the 21 U.S. summer Olympic sports federations spoke in favor of going to Moscow. Only diving officials voted against.

Nevertheless, U.S. political analysts believe Carter cannot change his boycott stance now and the White House has given no indication that a change is likely.

Although the U.S. has the support of "minor," Western-oriented countries such as Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Malaysia and Djibouti, the majority of the big powers are waiting until as close as possible to the May 24 deadline for acceptance of invitations.

Most nations are looking to West Germany for a lead and it seems Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's attitude is likely to play the key role.

West Germany is in an election year and Schmidt's decisions may be governed as much by domestic political considerations as by international diplomatic ones.

Prince carries on vision

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Prince Charles said today he's determined to carry on the United World Colleges vision established by his uncle, the late Lord Louis Mountbatten.

The prince, who took over as international president of UWC several years ago, said in a brief speech at the Lester Pearson College of the Pacific:

"Lord Mountbatten told me he wanted to be remembered for what he'd done to establish a global force for peace, which was his great ambition.

"I am determined to carry on the vision he established," Prince Charles said in a short opening speech to UWC delegates gathered from around the world.

Prince Charles also announced that a memorial trust fund set up in the U.K. in Lord Mountbatten's name will be used to encourage and support the concept of UWC.

He said the fund would mainly be used for scholarships to the colleges but said it would also be used to encourage technological research for help for the handicapped.

The prince seemed relaxed and rested as he staged a walkabout and talked to students at the college before the meeting.

Possibly because of an unplanned delay in the arrival of UWC delegates at the college, the prince spent several minutes chatting with students.

He told them about his feeling that the concept of the UWC organization was one way to promote a greater international understanding.

During his stroll through the campus he talked with one of the first Chinese students admitted to the college.

Postal strike looming

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office has rejected all non-wage monetary proposals from the postal workers' union and a union official in Saskatchewan has warned that a national strike is imminent.

The rejections are contained in a post office document listing initial response of government negotiators to proposals by the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Pat Davies, president of the Saskatoon local of the Canadian Union of Postal workers, said Tuesday it is just a matter of time before a strike is called.

She said people seem to be prepared for a strike and consider it the obvious outcome of the current contract dispute.

The union proposals include an increase in overtime pay to double time from time and a half, in meal allowance to $7.50 from $4, in work relocation bonuses to $1,000 from a maximum $300 and in night work premiums to a percentage of top pay rates instead of the current flat 40 cents an hour.

Among the non-wage proposals rejected by the post office are creation of a dental-optical-hearing plan, compensation for unused sick leave, establishment of a supplementary pension fund, payment of penalties for delayed wages and granting a 20-week paid maternity leave. Postal workers now have six-month unpaid maternity leave.

In most of these cases, the post office said the proposals are unjustified, that existing benefits are generous enough and compare favorably with those received by other workers inside and outside the public service.

Bank rate jumps in Ottawa as U.S. interest hits 20%

Times News Services

Interest rates in Canada and the U.S. soared again today as the Bank of Canada rate hit a record high of 16.20 per cent and two U.S. banks raised rates to 20 per cent to adjust for the rising costs of their funds.

The Bank of Canada increase, the fourth in a row since the bank moved to a floating rate in early March, is 0.71 of one per cent, the largest increase to date.

The rate, pegged one-quarter of one per cent above the average interest paid at the weekly auction of 91-day treasury bills, moved higher as the bank tried to catch up to U.S. prime interest rates.

The new bank lending rate, charged on infrequent loans to chartered banks, likely heralds another round of increases for mortgage rates and business loans.

Within minutes of the Bank of Canada announcement, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce jumped its prime lending rate a full percentage point to 17.5 per cent.

In Montreal, the Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal both announced today they are putting up their U.S. prime lending rate to 20.25 per cent from 19.75 per cent.

In New York, the Chemical Bank, the sixth largest bank in the U.S., boosted the rate to 20 per cent, leapfrogging past the 19¾ per cent rate set Tuesday by Chase Manhattan Bank. Chemical, based in New York, had been charging 19½ per cent, a rate it adopted only Friday.

A month ago, the U.S. prime stood at 16¾ per cent.

The 20-per-cent rate was promptly matched by First National Bank of Chicago, the ninth-largest bank.

Despite the recent steep increases in the U.S. prime rate, credit demand has been heavy. Figures released by the Federal Reserve Board last Friday showed commercial and industrial loans on the books of large banks in the U.S. jumped $818 million in the week ended last Wednesday.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, the finance department announced the government used $300 million (U.S.) under a stand-by credit arrangement with Canadian chartered banks and $729.9 million in U.S. dollar reserves in a major move to slow a sharp drop in the currency's value last month.

The government's heavy use of U.S. dollars to buy Canadian currency came as the dollar fell.

Liquor, wine prices up

The Liquor Distribution Branch has changed the prices on 155 products — 128 of them upwards.

The stiffest was a $3.55 boost in the cost of Hudson's Bay rye whisky to $15.75 a 40-ounce bottle.

International currency fluctuations and increased costs charged by suppliers were cited as reasons.

Other changes included: eight brands of Scotch whisky boosted by 20 to 55 cents; 64 domestic wines were upped by 10 to 70 cents.

In the imported wines, 35 were up by 10 to 70 cents, while 14 decreased by five to 35 cents.

Other changes were recorded in brandies (three brands up, two down), liqueurs (three up, four down) and unlisted and special varieties.

'Poison Gang' suspect eyed

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — The "Poison Gang" extortionist who has threatened to place more poisoned foods in Safeway supermarkets unless he is paid 100 diamonds has struck a third store and fled a drop site that had been staked out by authorities, it was reported today.

Meanwhile, the Riverside Press Enterprise said Riverside County Sheriff's deputies identified a suspect as Richard Quincy Williams, 46, of Winchester, who was acquitted in a similar extortion scheme in Sun City in Riverside County last May.

Authorities staked out Williams' home in Orange County near Santa Ana, but he was not there, the report said.

The "Poison Gang" extortionist previously laced jars of pickles and teriyaki sauce with lethal doses of cyanide at two Safeway markets in San Diego last Saturday and Sunday.

The latest target of the extortionist was a Safeway market in Palm Desert near Palm Springs, the newspaper said.

A man telephoned the store Monday afternoon and told an employee he was the same man who had poisoned food in the San Diego markets. He directed the employee to a bottle of salad dressing he said had been poisoned.

The newspaper said the extortionist demanded that the employee gather a large amount of diamonds and cash and meet him.

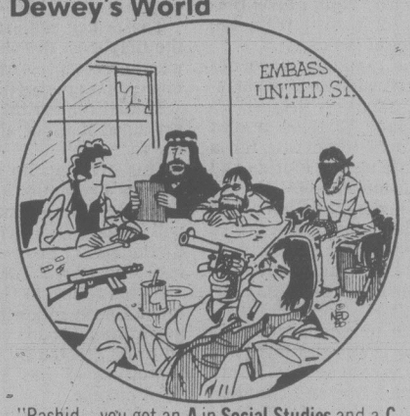

Safeway met the extortionist's demands and FBI agents staked out the site before the drop. The extortionist arrived at the site, but fled without the money, the newspaper said.

In last May's extortion plot, a man demanded $50,000 in cash and in a series of telephone calls increased the amount to $150,000. Investigators found a cyanide-tainted box of cornflakes marked with two Xs and a Valencia orange that had been injected with cyanide.

Williams was arrested in that case and stood trial, but the jury found him innocent.

In San Diego, all markets of the Safeway chain were operating normally Tuesday.

Visit the stars

The Victoria Times and VI*90 on Thursday will begin awarding double passes to a movie as part of the annual Visit the Stars Academy Award contest.

The movie will be for the 7 p.m. April 16 showing of Little Miss Marker, a family comedy, at the Odeon.

There will be 150 double passes awarded in a daily drawing from among early entrants in the contest.

Already more than 2,000 entries have been received.

The double passes will be mailed directly to winners as soon as the draw has been made.

Besides seeing the film, the winners of the double passes will watch the drawing for the grand prize, a trip for two to Hollywood via CP Air with weekend accommodations, plus five runner-up prizes, consisting of a dinner for two at The Empress and a double pass to a movie.

It first came out in 1934, when it starred Shirley Temple. Later it was called Sorrowful Jones and starred Bob Hope and Lucille Ball.

The latest version, to be shown April 16, has an all-star cast, including Tony Curtis, Bob Newhart, Julie Andrews, Walter Matthau and featuring Sarah Stimpson as Little Miss Marker.

St. Helens 'tilt' signals lava eruption

COUGAR, Wash. (AP) — The ground around Mount St. Helens has "tilted" upward, and scientists said if the swelling increases the awakening volcano might spew lava.

Meanwhile, volcanic ash fell in Vancouver, Wash., and Portland, Ore., areas, about 80 kilometres southwest of Mount St. Helens, after the smouldering mountain issued its most dramatic steam and ash plumes since it started erupting last week.

One good indication of whether a lava eruption is likely is a phenomenon known as tilting, which occurs when a mountain swells under the pressure of magma — molten rock — moving beneath the surface.

The ground near Spirit Lake just north of the mountain bulged upward about 1.25 centimetres Tuesday.

The tilting on St. Helens so far has been insignificant, said Don Mullineaux of the U.S. Geological Survey, but if it intensifies, it is a good sign that a lava eruption might be on the way.

An outcropping of rock at the summit appeared to sink at least 60 metres Tuesday as the rock wall separating two craters collapsed, forming one jagged 500-metre-wide crater. Mullineaux said it was another indication of "a lot of activity" beneath the mountain.

Mullineaux, who co-wrote a 1978 report about the hazards of a Mount St. Helens eruption, repeated his assessment that a full-scale "pyroclastic" explosion — one which would hurl rock and lava from the mountain — was the least likely possibility.

Path cleared for nurse strike

However, a spokesman for the nurses said no action is likely until after the Easter weekend.

Gilmour filed his report today with Don Munroe, chairman of the Labor Relations Board. The parties are expected to be notified of his action Thursday.

Involved are 1,500 psychiatric nurses and 1,200 registered nurses who work in community health units. No Victoria area nurses are involved.

The main issue in the dispute is whether the government nurses will get the same wage and benefit package given members of the B.C. Government Employees Union or base these cost items on the hefty increases contained in a tentative agreement for registered nurses working in general hospitals.

Prince Charles also revealed he'd just learned that the provincial cabinet has granted the status of marine ecological reserve to Race Rocks, through the efforts of Pearson College.

The Royal visit to the wooded campus was carefully planned with a heavy security detail spread throughout the area.

But in a surprise move, though, the prince took a quick detour through the student's dormitories and visited two rooms which obviously hadn't been readied for a visit from the Prince of Wales.

The students were delighted with their opportunity to speak with him.

Asked by the Times if he would compete, the prince replied with a smile:

"I hope I'm planning to compete — I need the exercise."

The prince arrived in Victoria Tuesday night and was greeted by North Saanich Mayor Eric Sherwood and his wife, Victoria Mayor Bill Tindall and his wife, Rear-Admiral M.A. Martin, commander Pacific Region and airport manager Jim Mills, airport manager.

The prince flew in from Vancouver with Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving and his wife after spending a day on offical duties in that city.

His appearance at the airport was very brief but those who spoke with him seemed to think the wait worthwhile.

Mayor Tindall called him charming.

The prince remarked to the mayor on the pleasant weather, complete with full moon, that greeted him.

Tindall replied that he'd arranged it especially for the visit.

This evening the prince attends a reception at Government House and then will go on to a performance by students of Pearson College at the Royal Theatre.

On his return to Government House following the performance, he is expected to be greeted by representatives of the Monarchist League.

Yesterday the prince had a busy day in Vancouver.

His itinerary took him on a boat trip around Vancouver harbor, gave him a 20-minute trip through a giant North Vancouver grain elevator and allowed him to meet and chat with shoreworkers at several fish plants in the city's east end dock area.

He stopped frequently to talk with workers, including several men sitting on a fish boat near the National Harbors Board chartered motor launch.

Why weren't they fishing, the prince asked.

"Because we're on strike," said one.

"What for?" asked the prince.

"More money."

"Are you going to get it?"

"I don't think so," the man replied.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union is on strike in a dispute with fisheries operators over the price of herring roe.

He also toured the TRIUMF sub-atomic particle research centre at UBC before dining privately at the Vancouver aquarium.

Obscene kettle of fish

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Delta fishermen were fined $150 or 14 days in jail after being convicted Monday of transmitting profane or obscene radio communications.

The federal communications department said the convictions of Martin Pybus and Werner Hans Sigmund are the first such convictions in B.C., but it warns that several coast guard vessels now are equipped with radio direction finders and more prosecutions are likely.

The men were charged following a coast guard and communications ministry investigation last fall into complaints about uncouth language on several VHF marine channels. A coast guard hovercraft carrying an automatic direction finder traced the signals to two fishing boats at the mouth of the Fraser River.

Trade balance surplus soars

OTTAWA (CP) — The merchandise trade balance rose to a seasonally-adjusted surplus of $815 million in February, the biggest monthly increase in more than a year, Statistics Canada reported today.

The January surplus was $317 million, December's $658 million.

Exports to both Japan and the U.S. were up in February.

Despite the unusually large surplus, there are underlying signs of weakness in the trade picture which appear to support government and private-sector forecasts of a lower trade surplus of an average $2.7 billion in 1980 compared with a record $4.1 billion in 1979.

For instance, even though exports have grown by 4.3 per cent to $6.2 billion so far this year compared with a drop in imports of 4.2 per cent to $5.4 billion, the rate of increase in exports has been slowing more than the rate for imports since last October.

Forecasters anticipate a slowdown in merchandise trade this year because of a long-expected U.S. recession.

A surplus in merchandise trade is needed to offset a major and growing deficit in services — such as travel, dividend payments to foreigners and interest payments on foreign loans.

Despite the trade surplus, the over-all deficit is expected to increase beyond $5 billion in 1979.

Asbestos risk high in B.C.?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite health concerns in the United States about the use and distribution of asbestos paper, Canadian wholesalers and manufacturers said Tuesday asbestos products are in widespread use in British Columbia.

GAF Corp., a New York-based manufacturer of asbestos paper, agreed Monday to stop selling it because of fears it may cause cancer.

The paper is wrapped around pipes for insulation, installed behind stoves as a fire retardant and used for other purposes.

Atlas and Turner Inc. employee Ian Styles said his company sells the product in a large volume to general contractors who use it for lining furnaces, and for insulation.

Styles said he was not aware of any health problems with the material.

Fleck Brothers Ltd. of Burnaby also sells asbestos paper as a fire barrier "because nothing on the market can take its place," company employee George Bluett said.

He said products which were potentially dangerous have been discontinued and current environmental health concerns are exaggerated.

"Some of the concern has been of benefit by eliminating some products which were dangerous, like asbestos shorts."

They were used to insulate boilers and produced a lot of asbestos dust, Bluett said.

Transit gas tax drives motorists out of town

VANCOUVER (CP) — Business was brisk Tuesday in the Langley area southeast of here as motorists sought service stations beyond the reach of the Greater Vancouver Regional District and its three-cent-a-gallon surcharge on gasoline sales.

Some gasoline stations in Surrey tried to keep their share of the market by absorbing the surcharge levied to pay for the GVRD's takeover of bus service from B.C. Hydro.

The GVRD's surcharge of .7 cents a litre took effect Tuesday and already there are signs of what might become a price war between service stations on the Langley-Surrey border.

Two stations on the Surrey edge of the border have reduced their price by one-tenth of a cent a litre and were selling gasoline for 23.1 cents a litre on Tuesday.

The border runs right in front of the property and his station sits within a stone's throw of his Langley competitors.

"Just how many times can the government tax a gallon of gas. It'll close me out," he said.

GVRD officials have visited the service station, he said, and he plans to meet with them April 17 to see if he can be forgiven the tax.

Dentist makes his point

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver dentist Murray Bloom won a partial victory Tuesday in his running dispute with the profession's governing body.

Chief Justice Allan McEachern of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that three members of an eight-member dentists' tribunal must be excluded from an inquiry into allegations that Bloom, treasurer of the B.C. College of Dentists, behaved unethically.

The judge also took the opportunity to issue a general warning to all B.C. professional bodies, which enjoy self-governing status, to act without bias when examining the conduct of members.

The chief justice noted that Bloom expressed doubts that all members of the court of inquiry, having taken sides against him on political issues, would act in an impartial manner.

In ordering the exclusion of three panel members, Chief Justice McEachern found that Bloom had raised a valid question concerning a reasonable apprehension of bias. He did not find actual bias.

The chief justice's findings of apprehended bias apply only to nine political charges of unethical behavior and not to two allegations related to Bloom's professional conduct.

The interim decision, which precludes three panel members from hearing nine of the 11 charges against Bloom, applies until the court can hear Bloom's application for a permanent writ of prohibition.

The charges against Bloom, which include two counts related to his dentistry skills, were laid in December after he made public alleged irregularities in the affairs of the college.

$60 million lost in fishing strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — A strike by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C. has cost the British Columbia fishing industry between $50 million and $60 million to date, an industry spokesman said Tuesday.

The herring fishery was virtually shut down Tuesday by the federal government.

A Fisheries and Oceans Canada spokesman said there is a remote chance the fishery will be reopened on the east coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands, but offered little hope.

The spokesman said 17,486 tons were caught, down from the 35,000 tons anticipated at the begining of the season. Last year 42,000 tons were harvested.

A spokesman for the Fisheries Association of B.C. said none of the catch was handled by the association because of the strike which began March 2. Those fishing this year were independent boats and members of the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-operative and the Central Native Fishermen's Co-operative.

He said the fisheries association normally handles 75 per cent of the herring catch and he estimated this totalled between $50 million and $60 million this year. Prices reached $600 a ton as the market for herring roe slumped because of the high prices charged last year.

This compares with the $120 million obtained last year when prices reached $2,995 a ton.

He said the strike and closure is "hurting us. We're not even covering overhead."

Teachers balking at letter grades

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia teachers are trying to resist a move by the provincial government to revert to the compulsory system of giving students letter grades on their report cards.

Delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation's annual general meeting passed a motion Tuesday calling for teachers to be given the option of using their own reporting scale if they do not agree with the letter-grade system.

They also passed motions recommending that parents have input into the method of reporting student progress.

Although most districts still retain the A to E scale, delegates said they didn't want to be tied to it. They argued that a B given to a student in Cranbrook would not necessarily mean the same thing as a B in North Vancouver.

Delegates also voted to oppose a suggestion that a Grade 11 math course be compulsory for high school graduation.

"If this course is required, the classes would be cluttered with students who don't have the ability or interest in the course," one teacher said.

Delegates also passed a resolution outlining what the federation sees as rights and responsibilities of students.

"We think it's time we gave young people in our province a bill of rights," said one delegate.

"We want students to be looked at as individuals with rights and needs," added a teacher from B.C.'s Fraser Valley East district.

Included in the list of 34 students' rights are: guidance in development of values; opportunities for developing self-confidence, self-discipline and self-reliance; retention of ethnic, cultural and linguistic heritage; awareness of the heritage of others; participation in decision-making and equal access to free public-school education.

"Underlying these statements there will be a corresponding set of responsibilities of parents, teachers, school boards, community and the (education) ministry," the resolution said.

Smith's door open

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Brian Smith Tuesday promised B.C.'s teachers an open door and a sympathetic ear.

Smith told the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual meeting that teachers have been unvairly criticized by both the government and the public for too long, and that situation will change.

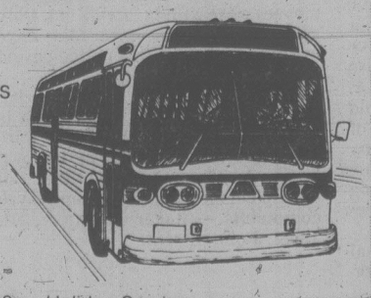

The minister said teachers now can expect some understanding for the problems they face.

He said the future of education in B.C. is in jeopardy without dedicated, inspired teachers who can impart knowledge to the young with enthusiasm.

Smith said he will hold public meetings throughout the province this fall in search of ways to improve the quality of education in the province.

A matter of navigation

Sam Bawlf is a persuasive fellow. He has already a provincial cabinet minister paying more than lip service to an idea he had two years ago for a tunnel beneath Georgia Strait. Now he is tempting former colleagues with the concept of a floating bridge to connect the Island and Vancouver.

Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer is so taken with Bawlf's ideas that he intends to meet with the world's leading experts in long-span construction. Although he has no serious indication from government or the residents of Vancouver Island that a $2 to $3 billion bridge or tunnel is desirable, McGeer and his cabinet colleagues would make better use of their time by looking into the operation of the B.C. Ferry Fleet.

Transportation analysts predict that the ferry system between the Island and the Lower Mainland will reach the saturation point in the mid-1980s. If Bawlf's figures are correct, the average daily head count on the ferries will increase 250 per cent to 50,000 by 1990. While these figures are startling, it should also be kept in mind that the present fleet can handle up to 60,000 people per day and that's before jumpo and stretch ferries are added to the fleet.

In solving immediate and short-term problems, the government should examine the report prepared for the Legislature's standing committee on crown corporations. The document claims the B.C. Ferry Corporation lacks long range planning and operates on a year by year basis.

The allegation seems sustained by recent events: The awkward removal of the Princess Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle run, the six to ten week suspension of the Port Hardy-Prince Rupert run, the dropping or an additional summer ferry to service Powell River on the Jervis Inlet crossing. The anxiety and economic impact of these juggling acts on both travellers a tourist orientated businesses could have been avoided by longer range planning.

The report states that because the corporation is without clearly defined strategies and policies, it is difficult to understand how the corporation reaches important decisions.

To finger solely the corporation board of directors would be to miss still another boat. So much of what it does is wrapped up in the storm of day to day provincial politics that there is little hope of long term strategy. Without guidelines on ferry fares for instance, the corporation has an impossible task to access even its income in years ahead.

The provincial government and in particular Transportation Minister Alex Fraser have given the corporation neither mandate or policy for long range planning, with the result that tourists and residents alike must needlessly put up with inconvenience and in some cases hardship.

Sam Bawlf may be guiding future transporation thinking towards the 1990's, but before cabinet becomes too preoccupied with bridges and tunnels, it should be concering itself with course of the Ferry Corporation and the 1980's.

Sellers of drivel

Judging by the tone of recent letters to the editor, we're probably trying the patience of many readers by again mentioning the Ku Klux Klan. After the recent coverage of a visit by the Leading Wizard himself — all the way from the southern United States — most people have had their fill of the group's abhorrent racist attitudes and beliefs.

But the wizard's visit, and the knowledge that one of his disciples is organizing a local klan, may bring back memories of a time when this country practiced its own legalized form of discrimination.

In 1923 the federal government adopted what was called the Chinese Immigration Act. It was the only act ever passed to prohibit a particular race of people from entering the Canada. It remained in force until 1947. Before 1923, a head tax was levied on each Chinese Immigrant and paid to the federal government.

Although such a policy is a far cry from the Klan's objectives, it does serve as a reminder that the promotion of racism is not necessarily the fallout of warped minds. The act was repealed only 33 years ago; the Klan has survived for 115 years. Society still has some distance to go.

MARY JANIGAN

Three western wise men

OTTAWA — For nearly a month now, The Stolid, The Steady and The Sloppy Zealot have been clustered around the cabinet table, musing about Western woes to baffled Eastern Liberals.

To Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, the presence of Senators Ray Perrault, Bud Olson and Hazen Argue is the only sensible way to remedy his government's lack of Liberal MPs west of Winnipeg. To Westerners, the shuffle of these senators out of obscurity and into cabinet status is a little like a gift of three pigs in a poke.

They did not elect this unlikely trio. They have not heard much about two of them, at least, in recent years. And now they are expected to turn to government Senate Leader Perrault, the distracted politician's politician; Minister of State for Economic Development Olson, the meticulous hard-worker; and Minister of State for the Wheat Board Argue, the disorganized farming fanatic.

Mixed reviews

Together, they are a bizarre crew. The reviews are mixed — with most of the raves going to Olson. But the Senate and cabinet consensus seems to be that while Trudeau may have overlooked a few worthy senators, Westerners didn't do all that badly in their unexpected cabinet hand-outs.

The reviewers, who predictably requested anonymity, rank Perrault as a blustery and not-too-bright gungho Liberal — but they say that his heart is in the right place and that his is an essentially harmless portfolio. They praise Olson as a solid worker who just wants to get on with his job — no flashes of genius but then, no flashy mistakes. And after they discuss Argue's sloppy appearance, they say that he is a hard-worker who knows his agriculture but who talks a mite too much about topics that he knows nothing about.

Perrault is the most gregarious of the trio, a 54-year-old British Columbian who hopped into provincial politics more than 20 years ago after a stint in public relations and advertising. After nine years in the opposition wilderness as Liberal leader, he joined his federal brethern in the Commons by trouncing New Democrat Tommy Douglas.

From 1968 to 1972, he nestled on the backbenches, collecting Parliamentary secretary posts. In 1972, he was defeated. In 1973, he trundled to his Senate reward. And in 1974, he first snared his current role as government leader in the Senate.

He's his own fan club. Scan the yellowing Parliamentary files and you'll find Perrault always hinting of Big Changes and Better Things, preening and fluttering around the press, talking about projects that usually never really unfold. Watch him work a crowd, towing awed small-town Liberals in his wake, pawing hands and preaching Liberal tidings. Nonetheless, his fellow senators tolerate and even like him.

A parliamentary official says that if Perrault's wife and three children lived in Ottawa, "he would make a great Senate leader.

"But because he's always travelling back and forth, he's not as well briefed as he should be — he should know what's going on and he doesn't," he says.

RAY PERRAULT

"But he's a helluva nice guy. When a retired Senate employee was in hospital, he took time to see her or call every week. Few people would take that time. That's why he's so well liked."

Olson is the hard-working plodder, a 54-year-old Alberta farmer and merchant who first marched into federal politics in 1957 as a Social Credit MP. In 1967 he simply crossed the floor to the Liberals amid minimal animosity — even though his departure was the death-knell for his party's ailing western flank. By 1968 he was rewarded with the agriculture portfolio and he earned praise even though he piloted through enabling legislation for those controversial marketing agencies such as the egg agency. In 1972 and 1974 he was clobbered at the polls. And in 1977, the Trudeau loyalist reaped his Senate reward.

Senate colleagues praise his committee work, especially his recent chairmanship of the northern pipeline committee. A Tory senator marvels that Olson was virtually switching that committee into an energy committee — he was about to tackle oil recoverability when the government fell.

A Senate official adds that Olson is a "father to everybody — he's always helping people, giving the messengers advice, telling them to come to him."

The most controversial of the trio is Argue, a shambling and amiable loner who will probably never live down his stunning 1962 defection from the New Democratic Party. The 59-year-old Saskatchewan farmer first toddled into the Commons in 1945 and he won every election until 1963 when the voters ruled on his Liberal conversion.

To NDP supporters, the move smacked of sour grapes in the wake of his loss of the party leadership. And he has been haunted by the switch and his own penchant for sounding off on everything from American black poverty to poor Senate tailoring services since his 1966 Senate appointment.

Marketing believer

Behind the scenes, however, Argue revived the Senate agriculture committee and whipped it into one of the most active Upper House creations. He's a firm advocate of marketing agencies. He's a Canadian nationalist. But to the dismay of consumers, he has also advocated an international wheat cartel and pushed for more Wheat Board power.

The cabinet jury is still out. Some members openly wonder if anyone else was available from Saskatchewan.

But a Senate official says that Argue is " a very nice down-to-earth chap who wears loud suits and perspires a lot.

"He's very bright on beef and grain — he's disorganized but he somehow survives — if he has an opinion,he'll state it," he says. "And he'll probably get things done."

Separate ways

The recent agitation by some hot headed Westerners for separation makes us realize this would mean further fragmentation of Canada as a nation.

Separation by Quebec is an accomplished fact either by the demands of Levesque or the quasi-separation as put forward by Ryan and Trudeau.

The guile by Trudeau in regaining power is daily becoming apparent; there are only two ways to go, retrenchment as proposed by the defeated Conservatives or national bankruptcy as designed by Trudeaucrats with the support of socialist leaders.

Quebec separation will mean Trudeaucrats must surrender to Canadians who intend to keep the country solvent and free of racial conflict.

Trudeau and his prejudicial Gallic antagonism to other Canadian cultures is imposing a death wish on Canada. We can survive without Quebec and will become a national entity without Trudeau.

The media with their facilities should act as a catalyst to bring out the judgement and opinion of the public.

Our federal and provincial representatives must as individuals and not as party hacks, state their stand on this matter without delay or equivocation. It is surely not necessary for Trudeau to be kept in power for a full term.

Let us hope other politicians will display the same courageous candor as Jack Davis, MLA, in B.C. and former federal Liberal member who has expressed his thoughts on this subject of national importance. — Ken Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

Mind-boggling

The forestry report recently tabled in the House for the edification of MLAs and the public is a mind-boggling mass that provides no clear picture of any specific forest policy. Even the summaries that accompany the 1,000-page report are mainly vague forestry theories and ill-defined statements of objectives.

After the 1976 Royal Commission Report on Forestry stressed the need for better documented policies and basic information, one could have hoped that the first new government report to the Legislature would have been concise and factual, not a mass of confusion. There is not an MLA, including the minister, who could clearly explain the implications of the present report. And I defy any forester to have a public discussion on the subject without backtracking and admitting to innumerable exceptions.

If the recent issue of the disposal of the Princess Marguerite thoroughly confused Victorians because of lack of planning and public relations, the same but even more serious lack of policy and basic planning exists in the government's handling of our forest resources. Unfortunately, neither the media nor the public have any criteria against which to judge what our forestry options should and could be.

For instance, the stress put on increased reforestation and the marvels of genetically improved seedlings is not only detracting attention from the more serious forthcoming timber supply problem, but it is misleading and fails to provide the alternate options to even the reforestation dilemma. If one considers that promises of increased tree-planting capacity have been made for the past 30 years, and we are still 'denuding' (the minister's own word) more land than we can cope with, surely an alternate forest land regeneration or management plan is required. God has been reforesting the land since the beginning of time and if we stopped upsetting the way he has things planned and 'helped' him a bit, we could concentrate more time on reclaiming past denuded lands while nature helped restock much of our newly logged areas.

Government foresters are practically accusing conservationists of robbing them of valuable forest land for recreational and wildlife habitat purposes. But if the truth were known, the unstocked forest lands are robbing us of more 'potential' timber than all the park reserves put together.

This is the forestry information that the public and MLAs are not getting. Yet the very economic future of this province is at stake. — D. M. Trew, 37-1240 Newport Avenue.

Equal time

Since the press has chosen to play its usual biased and irresponsible role with regard to labor, I, as a postal employee, demand equal time with the manager at Victoria Mail Processing Plant.

In your recent front page story, "Sorters sort of upset," you say that the mid-month overtime cheques were lost or delayed in the mail. The fact is that the cheques did not arrive, and, moreover, the fact is that times are hard. For many clerks overtime has become a necessity to shore up their rapidly eroding financial status. However, the issue out at Victoria Mail Processing Plant is not that the overtime cheques did not arrive, as your silly story suggests. Full-time postal clerks across the country are well aware of, and used to the inadequacies of Canada Post's Central Pay. What the issue is, is the employer's continuing failure to deal with employee problems in a reasonable way.

It is an old complaint among inside workers at the post office. At the national level the employer has repeatedly bargained in bad faith, and at this round of negotiations we have had no reason not to expect more of the same. At all levels, national, regional, and local, the contract has been flagrantly violated. In Ottawa, 60,000 to 70,000 grievances around these contract violations remain ignored and unresolved. Here in Victoria, the disappearance of the overtime cheques was typical. When the cheques did not arrive, the contract was violated. Was there any great stirring among local management? No, at least not until there was a rumor that a group of angry employees were willing to walk out. Only after the cheques were four days overdue, was a written notice posted regarding the lost cheques.

Unfortunately the overtime cheque fiasco at the processing plant is just one more example of how Canada Post has created, in its own image, local managements that fail to respond meaningfully to employee complaints. — Roger Pattimore, 204-310 St. James Street.

Foul our nest

I am totally disgusted by the latest plan to turn some of the world's most beautiful beaches into reeking, excrement coated strands.

Is money so important that we're prepared to wallow in our own filth? All the money in the world couldn't buy another Vancouver Island.

Will somebody please tell city hall that, above all, we cannot afford to foul our own nest. — M. Johnson, Box 1797, Station E, Victoria.

Shocked at play

I was very shocked and disappointed that a Canadian newspaper would give front page coverage to a German immigrant wanting to start a KKK here. It is people like that we do not want in this country.

The Jews and Negroes have just as much right here as any German.

I hope you will change your policy and give none or very little coverage to these people. — Mary I. Thompson, 2622 Dunlevy St.

Misguided support

The Times (March 25) carried two news items regarding the Central American country of San Salvador. One was the account of the assassination of Archbishop Romero, a nominee for last year's Nobel Peace prize, and a man referred to in a CBC news special last evening, as "the last powerful voice for freedom, justice and humanity in that country.". Another recent article in the Times, titled "Salvador Junta Using Terrorism", states, "The International Human Rights organization (Amnesty International) charged that hundreds of peasants have also been massacred by government troops and many more forced to flee their homes in several parts of the Latin American nation. It noted that the United States was giving aid to El Salvador's mixed civilian-military junta.

The other article headed "Cubans Aiding Leftists," said that the U.S. administration accused Cuba of directly assisting communist groups and leftist guerrillas with men and weapons to help overthrow the ruling centrist junta of El Salvador."

At the conclusion of the movie, "The Ugly American," the chastened and reformed American Ambassador to the Asian country involved in the picture makes the statement about American policy in that country: "The trouble is, we have forgotten where we came from. We have forgotten our roots." In those roots, the American Declaration of Independence boldly states:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

A very lofty statement to justify the overthrow of tyrannical government. The revolutionary movement in San Salvador subscribe to its sentiments and logic 100 per cent. Why does the United States insist on supporting the tyranny? — J. Philip Fawcett, 57 Wellington Street.

Simple solution

Over the past year or more, I have read many articles and letters to the editor, asking the provincial government to purchase Sidney Island.

I think this is a wonderful idea. Except 100 per cent of the taxpayers in British Columbia would be supporting a project that would benefit five per cent of the population, or even less.

If I remember correctly, the Sidney Island Committee at one time stated that they had 25,000 signatures to a petition to save the Island for a park. If this is correct, then there appears to be a simple solution. If each of these people put up $150, they would have more than enough to pay Jack Tod his asking price, then everyone would be happy. — F. O. Sutton, 7010 Seabrook Road, Saanichton.

Canadian business: Rule by oligarchy

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM
New York Times

"Power tends to connect; absolute power connects absolutely." — Peter C. Newman, "The Canadian Establishment."

TORONTO — Consumers Gas buys Home Oil and then swallows Hiram Walker. Hollinger Argus, which already controls Massey Ferguson, Dominion Stores, Standard Broadcasting and Labrador Mining, bids for Norcen with the millions received for its Noranda holdings from Brascan, which was seized by Edper Equities who redirected its bid for F. W. Woolworth. Hudson's Bay buys Zellers before moving on Simpson's and being consumed itself in a $641 million struggle between the Weston family and the Thomson family. Thomson wins and moves on to take over FP Publications, which controls eight of Canada's largest daily newspapers.

No one — not even Canada's federal government — can keep track of all the moves, let alone the score, in a continent-wide game of adult Monopoly that is sweeping across the United States' chief trading partner. What is clear, however, is that Canada's corporate concentration grows greater by the day. Economic power is flowing to fewer and fewer individuals. And because of the weakness of Canada's anti-monopoly laws and the lack of strong public sentiment against bigness in business, the Anti-Combines Branch of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is virtually powerless to do anything.

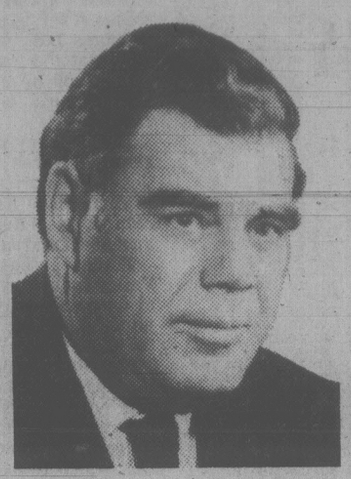

There is, in the eyes of government officials, academics, financial analysts and business executives, no reason for any halt in this steady trend. Indeed, a further acceleration of mergers and takeovers is expected starting this summer as slackening demand and record-high interest rates begin taking their economic toll of medium and smaller companies.

Yet, so far, very few Canadians are asking any vital questions. For instance, what forces — historic, political and economic — are seizing the nation and turning its resources, manufacturing and industrial might over to a dwindling number of corporate powers? Why now? How large is the merger movement? Is it good for Canada and Canadians? How does this powerful trend spill over into the United States?

Robert Bertrand, director of the Federal Anti-Combines Branch, warns: "What we will have, if this march of increased concentration continues, is a national oligarchy in which a few dozen people will interact to bargain about the economic future of millions." Some would argue that Canada has already reached that stage in certain sectors such as steel, beer, cement, petroleum, cigarettes, newspapers and aluminum.

They would say that in such sectors private oligopolies have formed, often after costly and economically detrimental bidding wars, to reduce consumer choice, choke competition,

SINCLAIR . . . largest sales

DESMARAIS . . . largest group

threaten the rights of minority shareholders, place too much power in the hands of a few and set the scene for market manipulations, which the government is virtually helpless to combat. Additionally, it is estimated that a million of Canada's 23.7 million citizens live in economically precarious, one-industry company towns.

"The essence of a free society is choice," adds Bertrand. "Fewer, larger economic units almost inevitably mean a narrower range of choices available."

When the proponents of larger-scale operations, perhaps 1,000 captains of elite business clans who have traditionally run Canada's corporate world, speak out on the matter (it is not yet an issue), they talk of the need for world-scale companies to compete in the shadow of the United States in an increasingly competitive international marketplace — especially important for a country that exports 25 per cent of its gross national product compared with 10.9 per cent for the United States. They also talk of the increased efficiencies of scale that develop and of the greater access to financial resources that a larger company has.

And as for any fear of bigness, Kenneth R. Thomson, who owns 37 per cent of Canada's daily newspapers, said, "There is a limit to how many papers one man, or company, should own; a point where going past it becomes ludicrous. But we haven't reached it. And I'm sure that we will know ourselves if and when we do."

These business barons do not talk of the excitement and satisfaction that accompany successful financial manoeuvrings and corporate clashes for power between the occupants of office suites just blocks apart here in Canada's business capital. But the cunning and enthusiasm for gamesmanship that pervade private conversations with men like Conrad Black, head of the Hollinger Argus empire, are difficult to disguise.

What cannot be disguised is Canada's merger movement. According to the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, mergers in Canada climbed from 129 in 1964 to 296 in 1974. The dramatic upward spiral began in 1976 with 313, jumped to 398 in 1977, 449 in 1978 and at least 511 last year (versus 2,000 in the much larger United States economy). While smaller- and medium-sized entities continue to be swallowed, one recent characteristic has seen large companies merging with other large companies often after a bitter bidding struggle with an equally large suitor. One result, according to recent figures on economic activities, is that the 100 largest companies now account for more than 45 per cent of the value added to goods in Canada, versus 33 per cent by the United States' 100 largest concerns.

Record-high interest rates and inflated costs haven't stopped a rash of highly publicized takeovers. For example, Dome Petroleum of Calgary, led by John P. Gallagher, chairman, 30 years ago was little more than a tiny oil investment company for Harvard and Princeton endowment funds. It has just completed a $2 billion acquisition drive to make it suddenly the largest Canadian-owned oil concern. The latest announced move was the $700 million purchase of the Canadian onshore oil and gas properties of Kaiser Resources Ltd., which acquired them 15 months ago from Ashland Oil for $485 million.

A leading oil and natural gas producer, Dome already controls much of the Beaufort Sea frontier play, owns 49 per cent of TransCanada Pipelines Ltd. and operates the largest natural gas-liquids system in North America.

Late last year the Consumer Gas Company, Ontario's largest distributor, completed its takeover of Home Oil of Calgary. Consumers' dynamic president, William Wilder, then released a surprising salvo: Consumers Home would complete a friendly merger with Hiram Walker-Gooderham & Worts Ltd., the huge liquor concern that was anxious to diversify into faster growth areas and felt the hot breath of less-friendly suitors. That step creates a company with $3.1 billion in assets.

Those other rumored suitors were Peter and Edward Bronfman, a particularly ambitious branch of the family that founded the Seagram company. Their aggressive moves in recent months saw their holdings seize control, among other things, of Brascan Ltd., the giant holding company whose assets included control of Labatt's Breweries, Canada's largest beer maker, and more than $400 million in cash from the sale of its Brazilian electric company. The Bronfmans' success aborted Brascan's billion-dollar bid across the border for the F. W. Woolworth Company. The Bronfmans have also bought a sizable chunk of Noranda Mines Ltd. and are reportedly shopping for energy investments.

Meanwhile, Thomson, son of the late press leader, Lord Thomson, had shifted his family's investment focus back to North America where he sank $640 million (much of it North Sea oil income) into Hudson's Bay, which has 35 per cent of Canada's department store sales, and an additional $164.7 million into FP Publications' eight major newspapers, giving him ownership of 44 of Canada's 120 dailies.

The loser in the Bay struggle was George Weston Ltd., whose chairman and president is W. Galen Weston. With 160 subsidiaries, it is Canada's second-largest corporate grouping and includes the Eddy Paper Company and Loblaw's stores. Weston recently bought the Stroehmann Bros. Company, a Pennsylvania bakery chain.

The largest sales of a Canadian-owned company belong to Canadian Pacific, whose chairman and chief executive officer is Ian Sinclair. Its 113 railroads, airline, hotels, paper mills, steel plants and other investments produced a 1978 profit of $350 million on sales of $6.6 billion. For 1979, CP reported $508.1 million profit (revenue wasn't disclosed). One subsidiary, CP Investments, controls the Dominion Bridge Company, which alone has absorbed 19 United States companies since 1971 in its constant search for new growth. Canada's large real estate firms, such as Olympia & York and Cadillac Fairview, which Charles and Edgar Bronfman control, have also made major United States deals.

The largest group is the Power Corporation of Canada, a network of 195 companies run from Montreal by Paul Desmarais, who has been consolidating his gains in recent months after a long acquisition drive. Power's diverse mix includes Canada Steamship Lines, Consolidated-Bathurst Inc., the Montreal Trust Company and the Great West Life Assurance Company. Five years ago Power made an unsuccessful bid for Hollinger Argus, yet another grouping, which is being reorganized and redirected by the young Black brothers, Conrad and Montegu.

The spectacular Power-Argus struggle ignited a federal inquiry into corporate concentration, which called mergers a "natural phenomenon" and took three years to report there was no undue concentration. "We found no inherent evils in such concentration," Robert Bryce, the commission chairman, said in an interview, "other than on the whole they weren't as profitable. They tended to overpay in the heat of competition. But that won't slow the trend down."

Such bidding wars are financed by Canada's banking system, itself an example of concentration. Among them the five largest banks — Royal Bank, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Bank of Montreal, the Bank of Nova Scotia and Toronto Dominion — control $207 billion, or 90 per cent of the assets of all 11 federally chartered banks. The concentration of banks is so great and the alliances of companies with specific banks so strong that a single bank can find itself financing both the suitor and the sought. Such was the case last fall for the Bank of Commerce when Brascan went after Woolworth's.

The banks with their corps of 60 or 70 directors each and their circling clans of corporations also provide the detailed intelligence system so vital in the fraternity that is Canada's business establishment. This, and a system of interlocking directorates, provide the tips, the data, the shared experiences and, above all, the connections that smooth Canada's merger movement. It is no coincidence, for instance, that Consumer Gas and Hiram Walker both use Toronto Dominion, where Hiram's chairman, H. Clifford Hatch, is a director.

Many in this network grew up at the same elite schools together, such as Upper Canada College. They join the same clubs, such as the Toronto, Ontario or Albany clubs. Their children marry within the network. But at the same time such valuable business links can also be denied to those such as Peter and Edward Bronfman or Stephen Roman of Denison Mines Ltd. who are perceived to violate an unwritten code of conduct by their manoeuvres, methods or just plain aggressiveness. One investment executive said, "It's just a way of saying, 'Hey fella, we don't operate like that around here.' And it usually works."

At no time during these manoeuvrings is much attention paid to the federal government. "We have a great concern over the size of these mergers," said Paul Mitchell of the Combines Branch, "but the law is toothless. Mergers are impossible to stop. We must prove an 'undue' loss of competition to the public's detriment before it happens." As one result, Canada has had one monopoly conviction since the Second World War, and that defendant pleaded guilty.

Several half-hearted efforts at change failed. And Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau seems unlikely to diplay a sudden enthusiasm; in fact, to head the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration, Trudeau picked Bryce, who had written the legislation allowing companies tax deductions for interest on loans to finance takeovers.

"Canadians are much more hierarchical and trusting of authority than Americans," said William T. Stanbury of Canada's Economic Council. "If businessmen say something is good, people believe it is so."

"Canadians have no automatic assumption that big business is evil," says the historian J.M.S. Careless, who has traced the development of large corporations through Canada's 113 years. Unlike its richer, more populous and more competitive cousin-market to the south, Canada's policies actually encouraged monopolies. While the seeds of America's trust-busting movement sank roots in the late 1800s, Canada's government, frantic for a transcontinental railroad to stitch together its diverse regions against American expansionism, offered the Canadian Pacific Railroad $25 million, 25 million acres and a guarantee against competition. As a result, the railroad was started and so too was CP's huge business empire.

So long Harry, and thanks

By TOM GODDARD
(A letter to the editor of the Vancouver Sun)

I had a friend named Harry Richter who was 92 years old and died in Vancouver General Hospital this morning. I am writing this because I want to say something on behalf of the elderly.

Harry Richter should never have died — his only illness of any significance was depression.

Harry's landlady told him several weeks ago that she had sold her house and he would have to move. That precipitated Harry's depression, because it was far from clear that there would be anywhere for him to go. He ended up in Vancouver General Hospital in a state of depression and his will to live severely reduced. It was apparent to Harry that there was nowhere to go and that he must die in hospital.

He was put in a single room, because he was apparently not sick by medical standards and so the hospital would accept him only if he had a private room and paid for it himself, since he was a man of significant means.

But being put in a single room meant isolation and loneliness for Harry and was probably the worst thing that could have happened to him. That, coupled with the fact that he had very few visitors, led to rapid decay of Harry's health.

Some of the professional staff told me I should try to get Harry into a room with other people. His doctor said it was impossible and that anyway he would die within the next two days. The doctor said Harry had a death wish — he wanted to die so I might as well accept that.

Well, yes, Harry had on several occasions told me he wanted to die, but that was only when he was depressed. Most of the time Harry was an optimist, and he once told me he wanted to live well into the 1980s to see if a certain religious prediction came true.

I'd known Harry for 12 years and had seen him, as an elderly citizen, subjected to all the abuses that society inflicts on its older members. Harry suffered from a lack of a sense or purpose and of a feeling of usefulness. He told me that every night he dreamt that he was back at his old job as a carpenter.

Harry talked about sex, too, but told me that if he took it too seriously he would be considered a dirty old man.

When he was 87 he was in hospital, apparently close to death. One day he was visited by a young female friend who, with good intuition, took his hand from the bed and placed it against her breast. Harry was out of the hospital within a few days. For a short time after that he expressed an interest in sex but was castigated in the usual social fashion with the familiar phrase, "dirty old man."

Why are the elderly denied access to life when they are still alive? Why did I continually encounter the attitude "He's 92, let him die, he has had a full life"? Why didn't they say that when he was 87 — or did they? It seems to me that Harry died because of the public's attitude, which in the end he probably shared.

If Harry had been younger there would have been a psychiatrist there to deal with his depression and a team of social workers to deal with his social needs. Instead, Harry had a large bruise on his left hand from falling out of his hospital chair in a room that he described, with tears in his eyes, as a dark hole of hell that he was never going to come back to.

That attitude toward the elderly is so dangerous. At what age do you decide a person has had a full life? Is it at the so-called retirement age, or some other arbitrary age? At 92 my grandmother had cataracts removed from both eyes and she is now almost 94 and carrying on strong.

Harry didn't have to die. Harry was a victim of society. Harry had a lot to offer society. He was one of the most creative and proud men I have ever known.

I met Harry when he was 80 and will remain, like many others, in his debt for the rest of my life.

So long, Harry, and thanks from all of us.

Building permits take Jan. jump

OTTAWA (CP) — The value of non-residential building permits issued in January jumped to a seasonally-adjusted total of $838.7 million, an all-time high for the economic indicator, Statistics Canada said Monday.

The federal agency reported increases in all kinds of non-residential construction intentions, with the sharpest increases in the public sector.

One official said plans for new hospital facilities in the Ottawa, Toronto and Vancouver areas were among the major projects that contributed to the record total.

Meanwhile, the value of building permits for residential units was down slightly in January to a seasonally-adjusted total of $646.4 million.

The statistics suggest that the current slump in housing construction due to record-high interest rates has been offset by other types of building activity.

The seasonally-adjusted figures for both residential and non-residential building permits are well above the actual values of the permits issued in January, but they are considered more reliable as economic indicators.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were slightly weaker in light trading on the Canadian bond market Tuesday.

The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues fell one-quarter of a point. Corporate issues were off one-eighth.

Day-to-day money was available at 16 per cent.

Dealers remained nervous and cautious in the face of a slowly erroding Canadian dollar and erratic acccount buying, an analyst at Walwyn, Stodgell, Cochran, Murray Ltd said.

The U.S. treasury market remained firm as investors are awaiting patiently for the 15-year treasury auction Tuesday afternoon. Analysts said its reception could dictate the direction of the market for the next few days.

The Province of Nova Scotia floated $10-million of 13¾ per cent bonds, due May 1, 1985, extendable to 1990, priced at 99.75 to yield 13.92 per cent.

Firestone shuts plant

HAMILTON (CP) — Firestone Canada Inc. said today it will close its Whitby, Ont., tire plant July 18, costing 650 workers their jobs.

The company said poor sales and changing market conditions have forced it to restructure its Canadian tire-manufacturing operations.

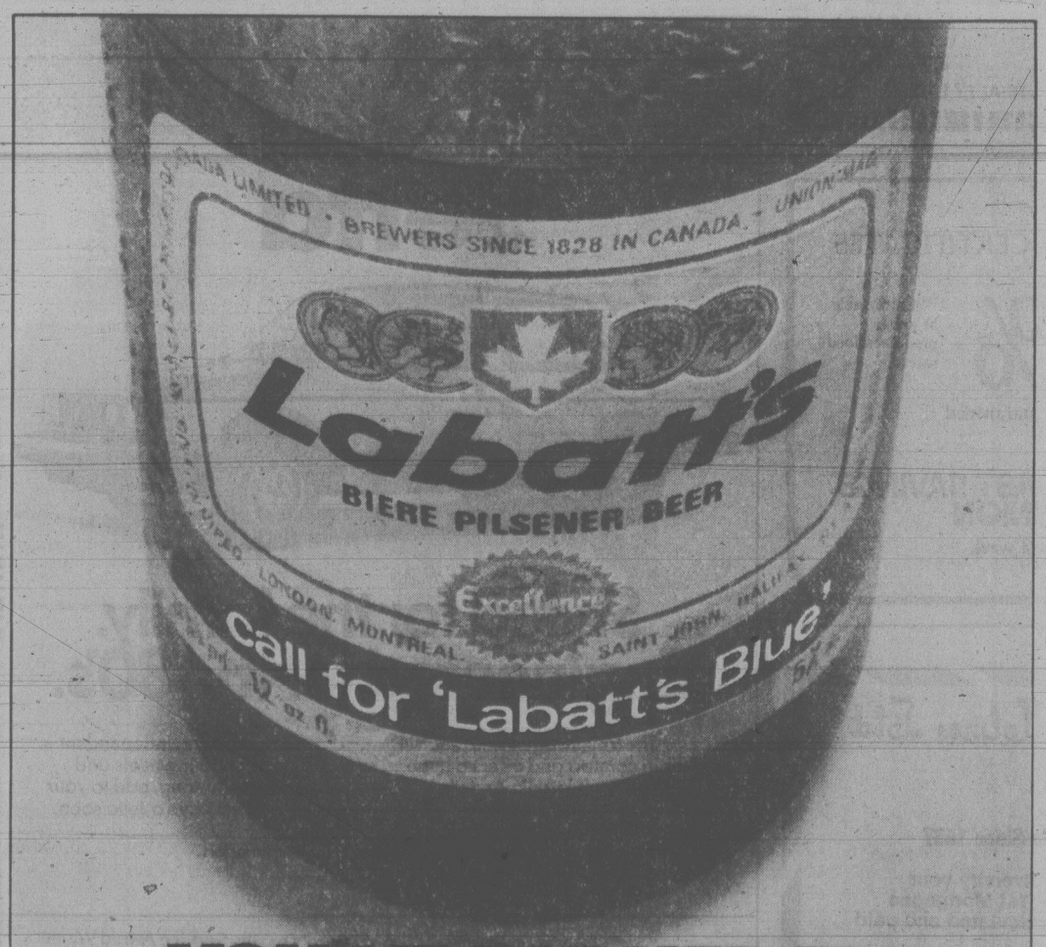

George Aucott, company president, said it will cost Firestone about $4 million to close the plant, built in 1955 and purchased by Firestone from Dunlop Tire of Great Britain for $10 million in 1974.

Leonard Collins, a United Rubber Workers' Union representative in Toronto, said Firestone sales have been sagging due to longer life of radial tires and a slowdown in the North American auto industry.

Company reports

Conventures

Conventures Limited's net income for 1980 is expected to reach $6 million, about $1 a share, President Carl Nickle has announced.

In a news release, the company said the estimate for net income after provision for depletion, depreciation and deferred taxes, is relatively conservative and reflects the uncertainty about timing of production starts, oil and gas prices, royalty and taxation policies.

Nickle said the company's oil, gas and mineral properties, held in various partnerships, are the scene of the most widespread and intensive drilling program in Conventures' history.

The company also announced that Tullio Cedraschi of Montreal, president and chief executive officer of CNR investment division, was appointed to the Conventures board of directors.

Gregory

Gregory Industries Ltd. had net earnings of $2.2 million or $2.59 a share on sales of $30.2 million for the year ended Dec. 31, the company has announced.

The firm said in the annual report to shareholders this compared with net earnings of $1.8 million or $1.83 a share on sales of $24.7 million for the previous year ended Dec. 31, 1978.

There were no extraordinary gains in 1979. An extraordinary gain of $127,000 resulting from a reducion of deferred income taxes on application of prior years' losses raised final profit in 1978 to $1.95 million or $1.96 a share.

Grouse Mountain

Grouse Mountain Resources Ltd. has reported net earnings from operations of $150,000 or two cents a share for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, compared with $2.5 million the previous year.

Including extraordinary income from recovery of income taxes, total net profit was $290,000 or five cents a share, president Douglas L. Fowles said in the company's annual report.

Fowles said despite good winter weather conditions in the 1978-79 ski season and heavy traffic during the summer months, the company's mountain operations continued to operate at a loss.

Revenue from mountain operations was $7.3 million, up from $4.5 million in 1978, while the loss was reduced to $578,000 from $2.6 million.

Drug bust nabs 16

KAMLOOPS (UPC) — Sixteen persons have been arrested and warrants are out for another 12 following a major drug bust that resulted in the seizure of several kinds of drugs, including marijuana with an estimated street value of $60,000.

Several of those charged began making appearances in provincial court Monday, when the RCMP announced the results of the operation, while others appeared Tuesday and the remainder were to appear today.

The 28 persons are charged with trafficking in various drugs, including marijuana, cocaine, and LSD. Drugs seized included 14 kilograms of marijuana, 60 grams of cocaine, 110 units of LSD and more than 400 units of other controlled drugs.

An estimate of the other drugs' street value was not available.

Kamloops RCMP Staff Sgt. Dave Bryce said Tuesday that the investigation was sparked by several police seizures of small drug quantities which led to suspicion that larger drug deals were being made.

The investigation has revealed a "very active" local trade in cocaine, LSD and marijuana as well as other prescription drugs and hallucinogens, Bryce said.

One person has entered a plea of not guilty while the remainder will reappear in court today with lawyers.

Truck blast evacuation

WARFIELD (CP) — A semi-trailer truck loaded with potassium permanganate went out of control Tuesday just west of Trail, overturned and was destroyed in a series of explosions and a fire.

Truck driver David McCormick, 24, of Tucum-Cari, N.M., suffered minor injuries and was in satisfactory condition in hospital in Trail.

A number of families in the immediate area were evacuated. The fire was put out and people returned to their homes.

Land owners cut off

OLIVER (CP) — Some land buyers in the Okanagan are discovering their new property has no access to public roads.

Bill Blair, manager of the South Okanagan Land Project, says he knows of at least a dozen cases where property was cut off from a public road. Some lots were cut off when the Okanagan Channel — a diked river connecting the Okanagan Lakes — was realigned in 1952, while others are carryovers from land that was homesteaded and never had legal access, he said.

The law now requires each property to have a legal access before subdividing is approved, but for those properties which have already been cut up "it's buyer beware," he said.

At least one couple has gone broke in an attempt to either get their money back or find a legal way to get to and from their five-acre parcel near here.

Frank and Helen Nemes say they have spent more than $12,000 in legal fees and other expenses trying to resolve the problem with their $27,000 property. Nemes has had two heart attacks and the family finances have reached the stage where the telephone company is threatening to cut off service for non-payment.

The Nemes feel they have legal rights to access, despite losing a decision in B.C. Supreme Court last month. However, they have no more money to carry on the battle. They intend to go to Victoria and camp on the steps of the legislature, if necessary, to get compensation.

They feel the provincial government should take the responsibility for allowing property to be sold without legal access and responsibility for what they believe to be an error on the official plan that shows an easement to build a road.

Pusher's jail term doubled

VANCOUVER (CP) — The protection of juveniles from drugs outweighs any consideration for the plight of a sick and derelict drug trafficker, the British Columbia Court of Appeal ruled Tuesday.

The court doubled a five-year jail term imposed in county court on John McKeoff, 45, of two charges involving sales of heroin to an undercover police officer in 1978.

Justice J.D. Lambert, who wrote the unanimous judgment of the court, said the most important issue was protection of the public from a drug trafficker, most particularly the 17-year-olds who now find themselves where McKeoff was 30 years ago.

Award reduced

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal on Tuesday cut $115,000 from a $150,000 award of general damages to a man who lost the use of an arm in a traffic accident.

In a unanimous decision, the court ruled that the general damages award made by a supreme court civil jury to Albert Leo Letourneau was inordinately high.

However, the court refused to interfere with the jury's additional award of $137,900 for future loss of earnings and $32,883 for loss of earnings between the time of the accident and the trial.

Rail slowdown

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 400 Interior railway workers were conducting a slowdown Tuesday to protest what they say is CP Rail's refusal to discuss local problems.

The work-to-rule campaign by members of the running trades, non-operating unions and shop-craft tradesmen had about doubled the time it takes for freight trains to pass through a subdivision, spokesmen for the protesting workers said.

Enginemen were abiding by a rule that lets them stop to eat, which they normally don't do, and dispatchers were shutting their offices for 20 minutes to eat.

Dispatcher Les Barry, local chairman of the new Union of Rail Canada Traffic Controllers which is trying a breakaway from the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, said local management is not listening to the complaints which include shift scheduling and safety inspections.

The unions are beginning the second year of a three-year contract.

Bravery medals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two dock workers were given bravery awards Tuesday by the Workers Compensation Board for saving a woman from drowning.

Daniel Larizza of North Vancouver and Merril Turpin of Surrey, working on the docks in Vancouver, were awarded bronze medals for saving Geraldine Williams from being carried out to sea by an ebbing tide.

Province aiming to stop fish processing takeovers

The provincial government today unveiled new policies designed to protect the B.C. fish processing industry from foreign takeovers.

The government put a moratorium on issuing new fish buying and processing plant licences last summer when it became apparent the industy was sliding into the hands of foreign interests, particularly the Japanese.

With today's annoucement by Environment Minister Stephen Rogers, the moratorium is lifted.

Rogers said from now on fish buyers' licences will be issued only to Canadians or landed immigrants.

Buyers will be allowed to sell their fish to licensed processors or directly to Canadian consumers.

"Any over-the-side sales to foreign floating processors or foreign buyers will require special licences and sales of this type will be restricted only to those fish that cannot be economically handled through existing B.C. processing companies." Rogers announced.

However, the minister said processing plant licences will be issued on a relatively open basis.

Licence holders will be required to retain bulk fish products for processing within the province and the shipment of fish for processing abroad will be discouraged, Rogers said.

The NDP promptly rejected the new policies as toothless and ineffective.

Prince Rupert NDP MLA Graham Lea said such shipments should be banned, not just discouraged.

"Discouraged? What are they going to do — rap them on the knuckles?" Lea asked.

"There isn't anything in the policy that would inhibit foreign ownership. We appear to have gone straight back to the way things were before the moratorium."

The policy statement says any new foreign-controlled fish processing companies will have to receive approval from the Foreign Investment Review Agency in Ottawa before a provincial licence is issued.

Rogers also said new policies will improve the atmosphere for expansion by the private sector in the marine culture industry.

The minister foresees development of potential groundfish, shrimp, geoduck clam, oyster and seaweed resources.

Security of tenure for foreshore leaseholders will be improved, licencing procedures will be streamlined, and the industry will be given development and investment incentives, Rogers said.

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — Two trucks collided head-on near the Dominican Republic's north coast town of Puerto Plata, leaving 19 dead and 12 injured, police said.

'No problem' on Rupert refit

A Burrard-Yarrows spokesman said today there will be no big problem — despite claims to the contrary by Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber — in getting the Queen of Prince Rupert ready for the start of the Seattle-Victoria run May 12.

The spokesman said the ferry will go into Esquimalt Graving Dock Monday for her annual refit and specifications for her conversion for use on the tourist run should be finalized by the end of this week.

He said the yard has the contract from the B.C. Ferry Corporation for the ship's regular refit although it does not yet have one from the B.C. Steamship Company for the conversion.

"The conversion specifications are still being worked out but they'll probably be finalized at the end of this week," the spokesman said.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser was unable to provide the legislature Tuesday with information on the refit plans.

Barber claimed that's because there are no plans, charging that while the government has been dithering, the shipyard has been unable to order necessary equipment for the renovations.

"They are now steadily missing all of the practical deadlines necessary to bring that ship into service," Barber said.

One of the major orders yet to be placed is for a maceration system to handle sewage.

Unless the Rupert is equipped with such a system or with holding tanks, it will be barred from sailing in U.S. waters.

Barber has more bad news.

There have already been floods of complaints that the Rupert is too small — only capable of carrying 800 passengers, half the capacity of the Marguerite.

Barber now says he is reliably informed the Rupert will actually carry less than 400 passengers — 387 to be exact.

The NDP member suggests the apparent mishandling of the Rupert's refit is actually being done on purpose.

"As far as we can tell, the only strategy they are following is to turn the Rupert into the most unappealing, unattractive little bucket that ever sailed, in order to create a demand for jetfoil service.

"In two or three years the jetfoil service will be turned over to private enterprise to make a lot of money, courtesy of the taxpayers."

MacBlo execs take $4.46M for 1979 pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors and senior officers at MacMillan Bloedel collected $4.46 million in salaries and bonuses last year, the company said in a circular accompanying its annual report released Tuesday.

Top earner was president Calvert Knudsen, who received nearly $500,000 including his base salary of $250,000 U.S. or $342,795 Canadian, $21,390 in benefits and a $125,000 bonus.

In 1978, Knudsen received a base salary of $284,753 Canadian plus $17,133 in various other compensation for a total of $301,886.

Bruce Howe, executive vice-president of operations, received $181,000 in salary and bonuses plus $29,805 in benefits.

Other top executive salaries ranged between $124,650 and $130,000 with additional benefits between $35,673 and $53,872.

MacMillan Bloedel is Canada's largest forest industry firm.

Duke arrested by immigration

David Duke of New Orleans, director of a Louisiana-based division of the Ku Klux Klan, was arrested Wednesday by immigration authorities in Vancouver.

The Klan leader, who was in Victoria Monday, posted a $500 bond and was released after four hours in custody.

But he must return to face a hearing on Thursday to determine whether he contravened Canadian immigration rules when he entered the country on Sunday.

Immigration authorities had information about a criminal conviction against Duke stemming from an incitement to riot charge in his native Louisiana.

Duke was deported from Britain, which bars KKK leaders, in March, 1978, after Duke sneaked into the country on a publicity tour.

Canadian immigration officials did not question Duke when he last visited Vancouver in April, 1979, he said.

The 30-year-old Klan leader said higher-ups in the immigration department were trying to muzzle him for his views. If he was a black or a different colored person he would not have encountered problems with the immigration department, Duke claimed.

Mair eyes indexing of health service user tabs

Health Minister Rafe Mair angrily denied reports Tuesday that he is considering increased medical care charges to make up $135 million deficit in the health budget caused by recent contract settlements.

But Mair said he is thinking of tying the current $4-a-day hospital fee and the annual medicare premiums to the Consumer Price Index.

Such a move would make increases inevitable.

"We certainly are looking at the question of indexing user costs in the health ministry but that is completely dissociated from any settlements that have been made," Mair said.

"It's something we have been looking at for some time and recommendations will be made to cabinet in the fullness of time."

Mair said an indexing method would prevent the possible doubling or tripling of rates every four or five years.

The Medical Services Plan premium may be harder to index than the daily hospital fee (currently at $4) because "you've got perhaps changes in services," Mair said.

The minister said he would like to take the changes to the government sometime during the present session of the legislature.

Mair also promised the financial pinch will not mean cuts in services — at least not in important services.

"There will be no cutback in any essential health service whatsoever," Mair promised.

Mair said it is not up to his ministry to cover the deficit caused by rich contract settlements for nurses and other hospital workers. It is up to the government as a whole.

"This is something the government will have to address. Anybody can speculate on how the money is to be raised.

"Whether it comes from new-found gas wells or in the form of taxes or by all of us tightening our belts remains to be seen."

The $135 million deficit was caused by large contract settlements with the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., the Hospital Employees Union and the Health Sciences Association.

The committed figure is $176.5 million — considerably more than the $41 million budgeted by the health ministry to cover wage increases.

Mair said the $41 million figure represents a conservative eight-per-cent increase.

"When you're budgeting for increased salaries, you're scarcely going to put in any larger amount for fear that you're going to flag something in the settlements," he said.

Mair indicated last week that some minor health ministry services might have to be cut this year to make up for the deficit. He also will discuss with Finance Minister Hugh Curtis the possibility of increasing revenues through tax increases.

Who owns B.C. farmland?

The provincial government wants to know who owns B.C.'s farmland.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday he has asked his ministry to gather statistics on how much of our farmland is owned by foreigners and what impact foreign ownership has on the farm community in B.C.

The minister said other provinces have legislation to prevent or control foreign ownership, but before he would consider such legislation for B.C. he would want a lot more information on the seriousness of the problem.

"I personally don't like to interfere with a person who owns his farm and wants to sell it. I hesitate getting the government involved with the right to sell," Hewitt said.

The minister's comments followed a brief from the National Farmers Union which claimed the trend in B.C. is toward concentration of farmland ownership in the hands of foreign interests and large corporations.

While Hewitt said he is willing to study the problem of foreign ownership, he is leery of interfering with corporate ownership.

Any attempt by government to interfere with farm corporations might step on the toes of small farmers who also find it beneficial to incorporate, he said.

The minister also said in B.C. there now are more farmers on the land, more acres under cultivation and greater farm production than ever before.

That optimistic attitude was attacked in the NFU brief which said more and more B.C. farmers find they must rely on off-farm income to subsidize their farming operations.

A recent study shows of B.C.'s 7,120 full-time farmers, 44.5 per cent were classified as low-income, the brief stated.

Spray survey set

CANBERRA (AP) — The Australian government is to conduct a two-year survey to determine how Australia's Vietnam veterans and their children were affected by the spraying of herbicides, including Agent Orange, in Vietnam.

Tunnel talk smoke screen?

The provincial government is trying to draw attention away from its internal problems by talking about building a tunnel to link the mainland with Vancouver Island, Stu Leggatt (NDP — Coquitlam-Moody) said Tuesday.

Leggatt said the government is actively discussing the idea because it wants to move away from questions on dirty tricks and "what seems to be a crisis in leadership."

"I don't have any doubt that they're desperate for any type of trial balloon they can throw up," he said. "Sam Bawlf's (a former Social Credit cabinet minister) idea looked like a good one to try and run with."

Leggatt said he is opposed to any type of fixed line structure between the mainland and the Island.

The cost of tolls will be astronomical and the risk to people using the tunnel is enormous, he said.

"And something more important than any of those factors is that the atmosphere of Vancouver Island should be protected," he said.

"And I believe a tunnel will start to change that kind of atmosphere. I don't think we need this place to look like a suburb of Toronto."

Leggatt said the unique B.C. lifestyle is going to be destroyed by the constant worship of the motor car which is really what the tunnel is all about.

Earlier, Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie) said his party wants to see a complete feasibility study of the tunnel question before it makes any firm stand on the issue.

And if the results of the study are favorable, the government should hold a referendum because the people should have the final say, he said.

Bennett satisfies union on Ocean Falls fears

The Canadian Paperworkers Union is satisfied following a meeting with Premier Bill Bennett even though there were no firm assurances workers laid off at the Ocean Falls mill will get jobs at the new logging and sawmill operation.

Union spokesman Art Gruntman said Tuesday he was satisfied the union was able to bring to the premier "our concerns for a transition period, our concerns that people there must be given the jobs and I'm sure he's made a mental note of it."

The government announced last month that the newsprint mill at the coastal community, operated by the B.C. Cellulose Corp., would be shut down June 1.

The closure was blamed on increasing capital and operating losses which now total $20 million.

He said the union's major concern is that the nearly 400 workers to be laid off will not get the 100 jobs offered at the new operation.

"We didn't get the answer that the people at Ocean Falls will clearly get the jobs, but we were assured that applications would go out and they would have those chances," Gruntman said.

Another concern is the six-month period given to Ocean Falls residents before they have to move out. The government assured the union, he said, that the period could be extended if the people are unable to find housing elsewhere.

CRTC Notice of Decision

DECISION CRTC 80-203
CAPITAL BROADCASTING SYSTEM LIMITED
VICTORIA, B.C.
— 790147300

Following a Public Hearing held in Vancouver, British Columbia on 13 November 1979, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission announces that it APPROVES the application to amend the broadcasting licence for CFMS-FM Victoria, British Columbia by changing the transmitter site to Saturna Island and increasing the effective radiated power from 19,000 watts to 100,000 watts.

In accordance with section 22(1)(b) of the Broadcasting Act, issuance of the licence amendment and implementation of the authority granted herein are subject to technical certification from the Department of Communications.

Complete texts of CRTC decisions are published in the "Canada Gazette", Part I, which is generally available for viewing in reference libraries; single copies are sold at bookstores carrying Canadian government publications. Decisions may also be read at CRTC offices.

Public interest groups are invited to contact the CRTC for copies of CRTC public documents.

MLA laughter 'sexist' talk rile Sanford

By JAKE BANKY

It's bad enough that a member of the B.C. Human Rights Commission would make sexist remarks — it's worse that government members find it funny, Comox NDP MLA Karen Sanford complained Tuesday.

She told the legislature that commission member Joe Katz recently said there is no need to have more female members on the commission because its male members can get the women's point of view from their wives.

Sanford's statement was greeted by lengthy outbursts of laughter from government benches.

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich, responsible for the commission, was forced to tell his colleagues to cut out their snickering and wisecracks so he could reply to Sanford.

He told her he does not concur with Katz's remark and he will make inquiries.

"No, I'm not going to check with my wife," he added.

Sanford told reporters she was appalled by the Socred reaction.

"It shows a 19th century attitude on the part of those government members and I am very disappointed in them."

She said Katz claimed after making the statement that he was only joking.

She recalled that little more than a year ago, other members of the commission were under fire for making sexist wisecracks and they also excused themselves by saying they were just joking.

"We've been subjected to these jokes before," she said. "Statements of this type make a mockery of the commission."

Sanford said the recent resignation of Commissioner Mildred Gottfriedson from the 12-member body means the commision now has only one woman member — chairman Margaret Strongitharm.

Six of the 12 members' terms run out in August.

Sanford urged the labor minister to appoint women to most if not all of those vacancies.

Heinrich would not give that commitment in the house but he agreed afterwards that more female members are needed.

"I think that's fair comment," he said.

Hydro export okay premature: NDP

NELSON (CP) — New Democrat Lorne Nicolson said Tuesday that National Energy Board approval of a licence for B.C. Hydro to export power to the U.S. is premature.

The decision, made public Monday, authorizes Hydro to continue to export surplus electricity, up to 10,032 gigawatt (one billion watts) hours a year to the U.S. until 1984.

"I'm outraged that this decision has been handed down before the committee on Crown corporations had a chance to ask B.C. Hydro the questions proposed in reports by committee research staff," Nicolson said.

Michael Jessen, B.C. president of the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society, said the decision may set a precedent for Hydro to continue exports after this licence expires.

"B.C. Hydro is wrecking more and more of the province to build more and more dams to send power to the U.S.," he said.

Drifters? Not that many

By AL FORREST

Don't dismiss that young, long-haired newcomer as a drifter.

He might have been born here.

The study shows that of 162 newcomers registering for work at the CEC in February:

— About 27 per cent were coming home to Victoria after having worked in some other city.

— Another 23 per cent were the wife or husband of someone who had recently been transferred here.

— Another six per cent were students or semi-retired people looking for part-time work.

— And only nine per cent could be described as transients, people who conducted only a brief job search here before moving on.

"We found most of the newcomers had some roots in Victoria, one way or another," said Rod Wikkramatileke, 27, who conducted the survey for the CEC.

About 60 per cent of them had visited or lived in Victoria before their latest job-hunting excursion here.

About 20 per cent had lived here for three or more years.

About 11 per cent had found work within the first two weeks of their arrival. Another 76 per cent were still looking while the remaining 11 per cent had given up.

All of them expressed a strong preference for staying in Victoria.

And 48 per cent said they had no intention of looking for work outside the city, even up-Island.

The climate and scenery of the capital remains a strong lure.

Most of the new arrivals were young, between 16 and 30, and more than half were male.

The survey was conducted at the request of local CEC manager Wally Pickering, who wondered what becomes of the newcomers and where they live.

The survey showed that 40 per cent were staying with relatives, often parents, while 14 per cent were boarding with friends.

Another 28 per cent had found rental accommodation while eight per cent were forced into hotel rooms.

A surprisingly high 10 per cent had already bought homes.

All of them indicated it was difficult to find rental accommodation anywhere in the region.

Pickering said it is a wonder they had been able to find any apartment space at all because the vacancy rate is almost nil.

The survey will give the CEC valuable background information to help newcomers with their needs, he said.

He had become concerned because of the large numbers arriving from out-of-town this year. As many as 41 per cent of the job-seekers registering at the CEC office each month would be recent arrivals to the city.

One problem the survey uncovered. Many people leave only mailing addresses when they register for work, especially if they have just arrived.

Often they don't know the number or don't have access to their own phone.

This is a serious drawback when hunting for work, Pickering said.

An employer usually intends to fill a vacancy within 24 hours and there is no time to advise people by mail.

There were 283 newcomers who registered at the Canada Employment Centre in February but the survey covered only 162 of them.

The other 121 could not be contacted for various reasons, including the fact many did not leave a phone number.

In some cases they had moved out of a hotel without leaving a forwarding address.

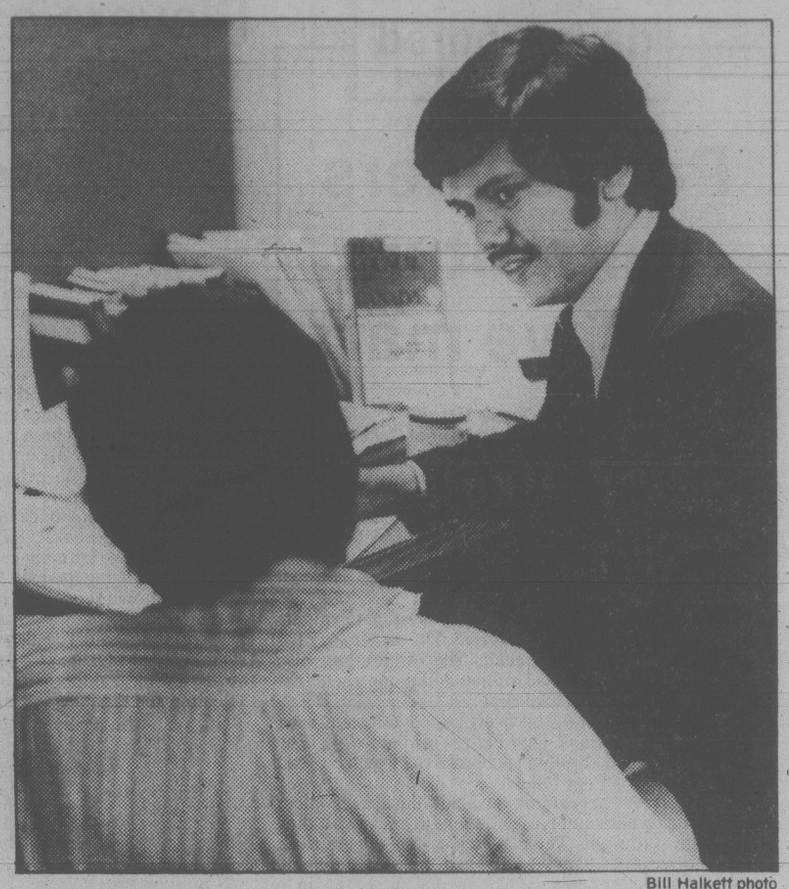

In other cases they did not respond to phone calls.

"We don't know if these people were not answering because they were at work or because they had left town. We can't draw any conclusions on that group because we have no data."

A follow-up study will be conducted in an effort to trace this latter group.

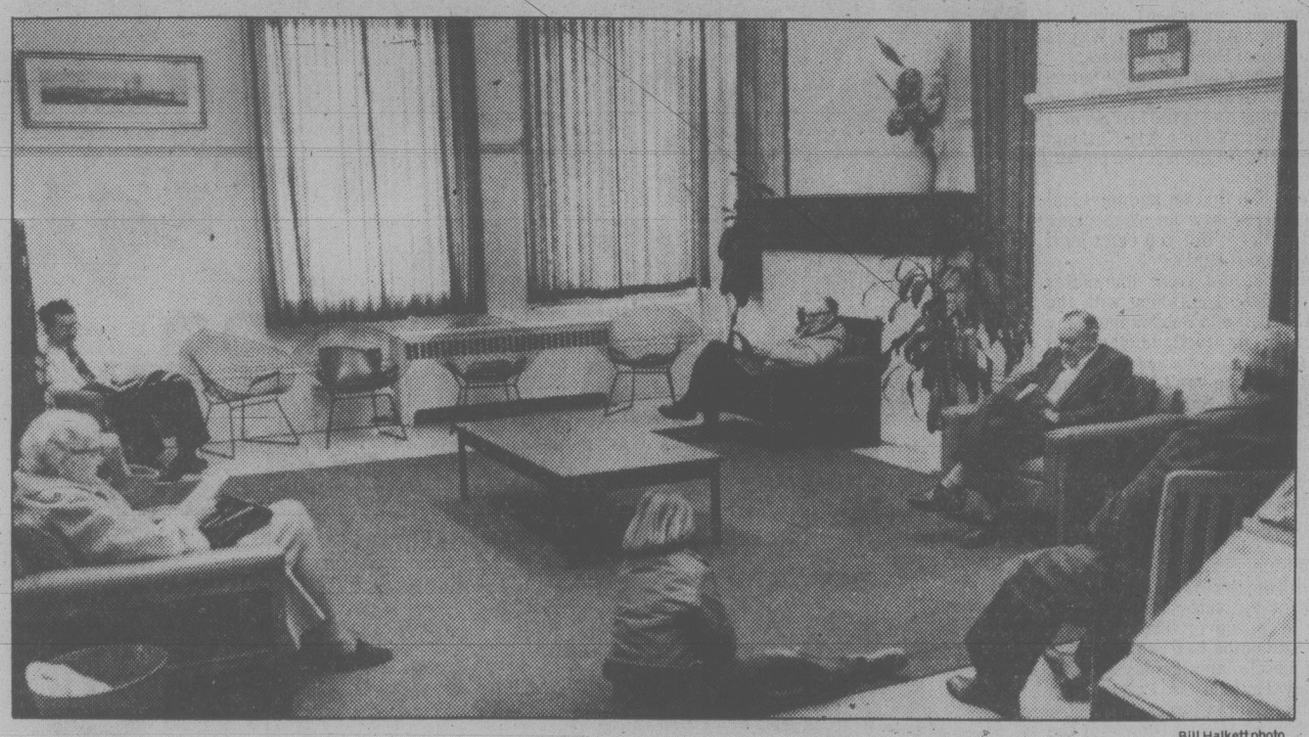

Through the CEC computer, a search will be conducted to see if they have registered at any other CEC office in the province.

"A few of them may have turned out to be drifters while others are probably still in the district somewhere."

Last read-in this morning for the regulars at the old library on Blanshard

No sad ending to this story

By NORMAN GIDNEY

After 77 years at the same corner of Yates and Douglas, the Victoria downtown public library is moving to spacious quarters in a new government office building.

And despite Victoria's reputation as a haven of nostalgia and heritage buffs, most people who work there and the patrons who borrow books seem glad to be going.

The old Carnegie bulding which was built in 1903 and the 30-year-old annex behind it close at 6 tonight, considerably the worse for wear. Four generations of Victorians have worn down the stone steps carrying books in and out.

"In a way I'm very pleased," said Marjorie Blair, interviewed at the library while she browsed the paperback racks.

A Victoria resident for eight years, she's in the library every week.

But she has no sentimental attachment to the old building and looks forward to using the new library.

Bruce Evans, the library's head of programs and services and the man who is supervising the move, is another who hasn't experienced a flood of nostalgic feelings.

"We haven't had time to feel sentimental," he said.

The work of packing 13,200 cardboard boxes with the library's collection of 200,000 books and more periodicals (propped upright as on a shelf they'd stretch in a straight line all the way out to Royal Oak) has kept everybody busy flat out for some time.

"We're organized like a military campaign," said Helen MacKay, head of the reference department. "It's like a field operation."

Many of the staff have "risen above the call of duty," according to reference librarian Joe Girard. There have been organizational meetings at lunch hour and others have been planning different aspects of the move at home.

"For most of us it's fairly exciting."

The library staff are in charge of packing and unpacking so they can organize the collection as it comes out of the boxes at the new library.

In exactly four weeks, the 50 staff will open the doors to the public at their new library in the shiny glass and brick Waddington building in the 700-block Broughton.

Like the modern structure itself, the library's agreement to use the space is up to the minute. Its two floors in the Waddington are rented from the province something like a condominium. The library will pay $400,000 a year rent but after 10 years it has the option to buy the space on a strata title basis.

Up on the fourth floor in technical services which buys all the new books and repairs the old, one staffer wondered with a laugh if their mascots, seagulls George and Sheba, would find their way to the new library four blocks south for their daily handouts.

Mortgage crusader here April 12

Viv Woolford, the Mississauga man responsible for a cross-Canada crusade against spiralling mortgage interest rates, will be the keynote speaker at a noon rally on the grounds of the Legislative Buildings on Saturday, April 12.

The former car salesman who quit his job to devote his time to the cause, had a rally in Mississauga on Sunday.

His West Coast visit to Victoria and Vancouver will launch a cross-country blitz, culminating in an Ottawa appearance in late April or early May.

Woolford says more than 300,000 have backed his call on the federal government to peg first mortgage rates at between 10 and 12 per cent.

He's shooting for two million names before he reaches Ottawa.

Local hairdresser Ena Curran, 4171 Borden, is still searching for a proper sound system to use at the rally.

She said radio stations and television networks have bombarded her with requests for details of Woolford's visit.

She had hoped to have posters advertising the event, but although a printer has offered to do the printing free, she still has to pay for the paper.

WOOLFORD
. . . noon rally

She checked into the postage costs of mailing an advertisement about the rally and discovered she simply couldn't handle the costs.

She hopes Victorians will turn out in droves to hear Woolford.

She already has petitions with more than 1,000 signatures, and there are dozens of petitions still out around Greater Victoria.

She thinks renters should take an interest in the crusade as mortgage rates have a direct effect on the rents they're paying.

$392,000 aid for UVic jobs

The provincial labor ministry has approved $392,000 for this summer's Youth Employment Program at the University of Victoria.

And while the amount is $7,000 up from last year, it still is less than half the $860,000 sought by UVic.

The YEP funds will provide 125 student jobs in 96 projects between May 1 and Aug. 29.

Ted Sawchuck, director of student and ancilliary services, said he's pleased with the government help but disappointed at the low level of wages offered in the program.

Fisrt and second-year students will earn $650 a month, those with more than two years will get $700 and those in post-graduate studies $755.

Sawchuck said he doesn't know how a student can be expected to save any money to come back to university on such salaries.

Pickets hit credit union

Employee-management sparks are flying again at the Sidney branch of the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union.

About eight employees picketed the office Tuesday and were out again today to protest the three-day suspension of head teller Judy Sayers.

The employees, about half of the total branch staff, claim they are being harassed and intimidated in their efforts to win a first contract.

Last month the Office and Technical Employees Union was granted certification as the bargaining agent for the employees after a long and sometime bitter campaign.

Sayers said today the company has appealed to the Labor Relations Board to reconsider the certification decision and in the meantime is "trying to break us down."

Company spokesmen were not available for comment this morning.

Sayers said the company's reasons for suspending her included the charge that she was handing out work unfairly to the tellers and that she has a hostile attitude towards her work.

It's Cep-ted for Saanich police

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson has accepted a challenge from Mayor Mel Couvelier to change the police force's image in line with needs for the 80s.

At a press conference this morning Peterson unveiled his plan, a concept called crime prevention through environmental design — Cep-ted for short.

Peterson said the concept was developed about five years ago in the U.S.

Saanich is the first Canadian force to propose it as a strategy in fighting crime.

Peterson said the approach will give police a bigger say in the management of the environment with the view to making the municipality a safer place for residents.

He said, however, its success will hinge on how much the community is prepared to assume a share of the responsibility.

Last week Couvelier told 60 senior police and justice officials at a crime prevention seminar at The Empress that policing styles must alter to keep pace with a changing society.

The two-day seminar examined Cep-ted as an answer to some of the problems.

Peterson said Cep-ted is like other crime prevention programs such as Neighborhood Watch but concentrates more on the general environment where crime occurs.

Its aim is not only to reduce the opportunity for crime but also the factors that give rise to crime.

Police would have a say in building designs, approving residential and commercial building developments and adjusting pedestrian and vehicle traffic patterns to cut crime.

Peterson said as an example that it would be unwise to have a large shopping centre located near a high school, a residence for the elderly next door to a playground, a fast-food outlet next to a liquor store or an all-night convenience store in an isolated area apart from anything else.

"Such developments only invite trouble," he said.

Peterson said police don't want control over developments.

"Our role as I see it is to act as stimulators, to bring possible problems to the attention of officials."

At present there is no mechanism for police to review developments at an early stage.

Peterson said the ultimate goal is to instil in residents a sense of belonging.

"The design is centred around the idea of territoriality," he said. "It means not only taking care of your own property but also those around you."

He said incentives, such as preferred insurance premiums or tax benefits, could be created to encourage residents to follow good design features and crime prevention practices.

"I can't promise Cep-ted would deliver," he said.

"The police can't do it alone. What we can only do is intervene at an early point and hopefully prevent an atmosphere which spawns crime from developing."

Meanwhile, the seminar planning committee which arranged last week's Cep-ted seminar will met again at the end of the month to plan its next move.

The committee comprises senior police and crime prevention officers from Victoria and the Lower Mainland as well as representatives from the federal solicitor-general's department and provincial attorney-general ministry and a criminologist from Simon Fraser University.

Poor owners want return to slave mart

DALLAS — The Dallas Times Herald carried a story at the top of page 1 Tuesday that reassured those of us who were worried that Nelson Bunker Hunt, the Texas oil man, might be ruined financially by the collapse of the silver market. A lawyer announced that while the precipitous decline of silver hurt the Hunts, the family "is still worth billions of dollars."

Whew, that was a close one.

Now we can worry about the owners of baseball teams.

Poor fellows. They would have us stay up nights praying for their economic salvation. The owners say the players are out to kill baseball. The owners say also players are greedy for those million-dollar contracts that will drive the game into bankruptcy.

Maybe we should take up an office collection and send it to Ray Kroc, the San Diego Padres' owner. Why, if he paid Dave Winfield $1 million a year, Kroc would be dead broke in 600 years. Poor fellow.

In the current bargaining for a new basic agreement between the owners and players, the players say all they want is the status quo. The players say the owners can't control themselves. They say the owners are making those million-dollar deals without anyone putting a gun to their heads. The players say they aren't about to give up the freedom they won in contract talks four years ago. They aren't going to save the owners from themselves.

Unless things change quickly, then, there will be a strike by the players this season, coming on May 22.

The critical issue, as always, is free agency.

The mind reels. Free agency has been a godsend to baseball. The last five seasons have been among the most exciting in baseball history. Attendance set records, television revenues increased dramatically, public attention was riveted to the game year 'round.

But the owners don't like free agents.

In fact, the players are not truly free to move from job to job, as any American is to leave the line at General Motors for a job at Ford. The players struck a compromise with the owners four years ago when they signed the basic agreement that expired December 31. It was a compromise that revived America's interest in baseball, because suddenly stars moved from team to team in big-money deals that had the power to change a team's character overnight.

The compromise in that contract was that the players could become free agents after six years with their original team. As free agents, they were able to deal with a maximum of 12 of the 26 teams.

Under a previous ruling by a federal judge, the players had been set totally free. They could change jobs at the end of their contracts, just as, say, a sportswriter could move from Washington to New York.

But the players agreed to a compromise with the owners, who said total freedom would wreck their business by allowing the richest teams to buy up all the stars. So the players gave away some of their freedom by agreeing to the six-year, 13-team arrangement.

And now baseball's owners want out of the deal.

The owners want to go back to the slave-owning days of the 50 years preceding the federal judge's proclamation of emancipation. "The owners liked it better," said Marvin Miller, the players' labor leader, "when they had a full monopoly, when they could say 'you take this or go pick cotton.'"

The baseball owners look at the National Football League with envy. They see the NFL having none of this million-dollar contract trouble. They see no free agents jumping from team to team. Of 200 free agents in the NFL, only one has signed with another team that then gave compensation to the original team.

Baseball owners would like that. It won't happen. Ed Garvey, the NFL players labor boss, says the football owners differ from baseballs' in that the NFL people make big money no matter how their teams perform. That's because each team gets $5 million annually from a TV deal.

"There's no economic incentive for Jack Kent Cooke (the Redskins' owner) to sign free agents but there is for George Steinbrenner (the Yankees' owner)," Garvey said. "If an NFL team goes 0-16, it still makes its $5.5 million. If it goes 16-0, it will make maybe $10,000 more.

"But if you took, say, half the TV contract and split it up between just the two Super Bowl teams, boy, if the teams could make $150 million dollars from the Super Bowl, you'd see some scrambling for free agents then."

The NFL is a giant system of socialism, with all the teams sharing in all the revenues. The football owners work together to a common end. Baseball owners are independant competitors of such cutthroat habits that, according to Miller, one told him, "Our problem is we can't control our own people. One year it's be a Kroc, and the next it's Gene Autry or Brad Corbett, then Steinbrenner. So you're it, Marvin."

It is weird, Miller said, to have management asking the labor union leader to save management from itself.

The owners' position in the current negotiations is also unusual in that they are asking the players to pretty please go back to working in the cotton fields of the old plantations. The owners have given up a fixed salary proposal which was ridiculous on face, but they still want an end to an existing free agency.

Much as football and basketball have compensation rules that have discouraged the movement of free agents, baseball wants a compensation rule. The owners have proposed that a team losing a free agent be entitled to pick a player from the other team's roster after that team protects 15 men.

Miller smiles at the audacity. "The player, under such a rule, is now not free. There is a cost to sign him. The 16th best player, almost by definition, is a regular. That will inhibit the bargaining power of the free agent."

Without our sympathy, Nelson Bunker Hunt and Ray Kroc will get along with their mere billions and millions and so will Dave Winfield make do with several hundred thousand for swinging a stick. The average baseball salary is $121,000, basketball's is $189,000, football's $69,000. Athletes are paid well, but they have rare talents that produce big money for the owners.

If we withhold our sympathy for the poor $121,000-a-year baseball player, he yet deserves the freedom of the assembly line worker. And when, by the way, did you last see the owner of a baseball team sell out at a loss? If the owner doesn't like what's happening, he can always sell for a profit. The Mets brought $22 million.

Sing us no sad songs, Ray Kroc.

Players call two strikes... ...against baseball owners

A battle of pocketbooks

DALLAS (AP) — Taking dead aim at management's bank accounts, the Major League Players Association has called not one, but two strikes against baseball.

Neither of them is coming on Opening Day, which had seemed the logical target. Instead of endangering the start of the regular season, the players chose a two-pronged attack they hope will do the greatest possible economic damage to team owners.

The owners struck back at the players' pocketbooks, saying they would leave training camps open but refusing to pay meal money, allowances and hotel costs.

The players said Tuesday they would cancel the final 92 games of the spring training exhibition schedule and then they promised that, unless a new agreement is negotiated by midnight May 22, they will not play games starting the following day.

The cancelled exhibitions include lucrative series in California between the Angels and Los Angeles Dodgers, and in Texas between the Rangers and Houston Astros. And, for their second strike date, the players chose the weekend before Memorial Day, traditionally one of baseball's largest revenue periods.

"We're trying to hurt them in the pocketbook as deeply as we can," said Mike Marshall, who doubles as player rep for Minnesota Twins and the American League. "We refuse to allow them to generate any more money before Opening Day."

The players were prepared to stay in training camps and continue working out, even playing intrasquad games to stay in shape if management wants that. But they will not play exhibition games where admissions would be charged.

In return, a spokesman for the owners said camps will remain open to those players who wish to work out for the remainder of the spring training period. But, "Since the individual player contract requires that players will appear in scheduled exhibition games and since the players have announced they will not appear in such games, meal money, allowances and hotel costs will not be paid."

Several of the player reps left the impression the players might not stay at the camps if they didn't get their expenses.,

Many players had expressed a sentiment for striking immediately rather than waiting until the season is under way. In 1972, players walked out three days before the start of the season and remained on strike for 13 days, causing 86 games to be cancelled. But the strategy this time was altered.

One advantage to delaying any regular season strike action is that the players will receive three cheques between Opening Day and May 22. That could go a long way to withstanding the economic pressures that a walkout might bring.

Ray Grebey, management's chief representative, who has negotiated for 20 weeks with Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, said Tuesday night:

"It is encouraging to note that the championship season will start as scheduled. It is the continued objective of major league baseball to achieve a negotiated settlement without interruption of the championship season."

But Miller said, "It has been the owners' strategy throughout the talks to provoke a strike and portray themselves as the wounded parties."

Ken Moffett, a federal mediator who joined the talks Sunday, summoned both sides to a negotiating session Thursday.

The players do not receive salary cheques until the season has begun. During spring training they are paid weekly sums to cover expenses. Cincinnati Reds, for instance, give players in camp $90.50 a week plus $16.50 a week for housing and $25.50 a day for food.

The Butler (Jerry) did it

Times News Services

What evil lurks in the hearts of men? Only The Shadow knows — the Butler did it!

Jerry Butler, a 29-year-old journeyman winger, played the role of the shadow for Vancouver Canucks at Vancouver Tuesday night in shutting down Wayne Gretzky and the scoring machine of Edmonton Oilers.

Gretzky, coming off a six-point performance Saturday in Toronto against the Maple Leafs, was limited to one shot on goal (from outside the blue line in the last period) as the Canucks blanked the Oilers 5-0 in a key National Hockey League game in the battle for the last two playoff berths.

"I hadn't checked anyone like that on an individual basis before, although I've played on a lot of checking lines over the years," said Butler. "But you can't do it yourself — you've got to have some help."

Butler, a right winger, got aid from line-mates Per-Olov Brasar and Chris Oddleifson, along with the defensive pairing of Harold Snepsts and Bob Manno. They held Gretzky and his wingers, Blair MacDonald and Don Ashby, to just four shots on goal.

"We're into a situation where he can't be giving up goals at this stage of the season," added Butler. "My biggest asset is as a checker and that's what I go out to do."

Vancouver, Edmonton and Washington Capitals all are tied at 66 points with two games left in the regular-season schedule. They are three points behind 14th-place Hartford Whalers and three ahead of 18th-place Detroit Red Wings.

The NHL's four division winners advance to the playoffs, along with the teams with the next 12 best records.

The Canucks finish off their season against Los Angeles Kings with games in Vancouver, Thursday, and in Los Angeles, Saturday. Edmonton has two games at home, tonight against Minnesota and Friday against Colorado. The Capitals play Thursday at Philadelphia and Saturday at home against Atlanta Flames.

Gretzky fell one point behind Marcel Dionne of the Kings' in the individual scoring race as Dionne picked up one assist in a 4-3 decision over Colorado, giving him 134 points.

Coach Harry Neale said that Dionne can expect to see a lot of Butler and his line-mates in the two remaining games.

"It was a great team performance because we got a solid effort from everyone, not just Butler," said Neale. "We played tonight like we do most games on the road."

Ivan Boldirev scored twice and Dave Williams, Thomas Gradin and Curt Fraser completed the scoring. Stan Smyl had four assists to tie Andre Boudrias for the club single-season scoring record of 78 points set five years ago.

WHEELING away from Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky is Tiger Williams of Vancouver Canucks in key National Hockey League game in Vancouver Tuesday. Williams scored one goal in Canucks' 5-0 win over Oilers while Gretzky was held to one shot on goal by checking of Vancouver's Jerry Butler.

In other games, Washington defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 6-2, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Hartford 5-4, St. Louis Blues downed Chicago Black Hawks 5-2, Buffalo Sabres got by Atlanta 5-3, New York Islanders and Minnesota North Stars played to a 1-1 tie and Philadelphia and Quebec settled for a 3-3 decision.

Gil Perreault scored twice and assisted on two other goals in Atlanta to help Buffalo climb into sole possession of second place in over-all standings, two points ahead of the idle Montreal Canadiens with three games left for both teams. Ric Seiling also scored two goals and Richard Martin chipped in his 44th of the season. Don Lever and Kent Nilsson replied for the Flames.

Hawks desperate after third defeat

There should be no doubt about it. The Winter Hawks will be desperate tonight when they take on Victoria Cougars in Portland, trying to keep Western Hockey League playoff hopes alive.

The Western Division champion Winter Hawks were edged 5-4 by the Breakers in Seattle Tuesday night and now have one win and three losses in the eight-game, double round-robin playoff series.

With the score tied 4-4 in Seattle, Tom Stanger scored the winning goal for the Breakers at 17:58 of the third period. That tally came only 31 seconds after Gary Yaremchuk had tied the score for the Hawks.

Seattle's other goals were scored by Don Werbenuik, who had two, Joe Ward and John Neeld. Winter Hawks' other goals came from Ed Cooper, Florent Robidoux and Tim Tookey.

Calgary Wranglers got three goals from Jeff Stoughton and two from Don Keller to blast Brandon Wheat Kings 8-0 in Calgary in Tuesday's only other WHL game.

Calgary's remaining goals were scored by Garry Slezak, Kelly Kisio and Buzz Gottschalk.

The Calgary win tied the best-of-seven Eastern Division quarter-final series at 3-3 and the last game will be played in Calgary Thursday night.

WHL scoring champion Doug Wickenheiser of Regina Pats was one of three players named Tuesday as the outstanding players in major junior hockey in Canada.

The other two were goaltender Paul Pageau of Shawinigan Cataractes of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and forward Jim Fox of Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association.

An 18-year-old centre, Wickenheiser took the WHL scoring title this year with 170 points that included 89 goals in 71 games and is expected to be one of the leading National Hockey League draft choices this spring.

The three were named finalists for the Canadian major junior player of the year award and the winner will be named during next month's Memorial Cup championships.

It's a special puck

EDMONTON (CP) — For the most part, a hockey puck is an insignificant piece of rubber — kicked at, whacked around, even left to freeze in the dark.

Not anymore.

Since Nov. 27, 1979, one special hockey puck has been in demand. An offer of $500 couldn't pry it loose from its owner.

It will be treated like royalty Friday. It will be flown from Denver to Edmonton, courtesy an Edmonton newspaper, to be shown to 16,000 persons.

A National Hockey League game in Denver four months ago gave this puck special status.

Early in the third period, Colorado Rockies pulled goalie Bill McKenzie for a sixth attacker while New York Islanders were being fingered for a delayed penalty. But Colorado's Rob Ramage slid an errant pass the length of the ice — into his own net.

The goal was initially credited to New York defenceman Dave Lewis, so the puck was put back in play. It was eventually fired into the crowd and wound up in the hands of Ted Reece of Denver.

After the game, a study of the videotape replay showed that the puck had last been touched by New York goaltender Billy Smith. He became the first netminder in 62 years of the NHL to be credited with a goal.

Bryson Stone, a hockey enthusiast who is also the assistant to the publisher at The Journal, took out an ad in the Denver Post offering $500 for the puck.

Reece replied and it was ascertained that the puck was the historic one. But Reece refused to sell.

The newspaper agreed to fly Reece to Edmonton with the Rockies for their Good Friday game against the Oilers, at which time Reece would turn the puck over to the Hockey Hall of Fame in a presentation at centre ice.

Lefty Reid, director and curator of the hall in Toronto, has arranged for Edmonton owner Peter Pocklington, an NHL governor, to accept the puck.

Seasprays dominate selections

Victoria Seasprays supplied over half of the 22 players making up the Canada West Field Lacrosse Association all-star team flying south Thursday for the Western States tournament in Palo Alto, Calif.

The two-day tournament, with entries from most of the western states in addition to the lone Canadian team, starts Saturday.

George Grover of Victoria is the manager.

The Canadian team is seeded third in the 16-team tourney behind top-ranked San Francisco Lacrosse Club and Orange County Lacrosse Club.

Sidney Island park deal has national backing

by stewart lang

And, from this writer's point of view, the letter was remarkably restrained.

"On July 9, 1979 we wrote to you concerning the future of Sidney Island. We have not yet received a reply.

"In our letter we appealed to the British Columbia government to purchase the remaining private land on the island for ecological reserves within a provincial park. I understand that the island was taken off the market shortly after the province acquired 105 acres to expand the existing park, but was recently put back on sale.

"We again appeal to you, Mr. Premier, to buy the privately held lands on Sidney Island for the people of British Columbia and Canada in order to provide outstanding recreational opportunities in a natural setting while protecting features of provincial significance."

In the earlier letter, Pratt outlined a resolution passed at the annual general meeting of the organization, which has 20,000 members across Canada.

"WHEREAS Sidney Island has three ecosystems that warrent protection as ecological reserves, two of which are not adequately represented in the British Columbia ecological reserve system and are not available elsewhere;

"AND WHEREAS since 1959 most of Sidney Island has been administered as a private wildlife area in addition to an existing small marine park;

"AND WHEREAS the Island's tidal flats and salt marshes provide important habitat for migrating waterfowl and shorebirds;

"AND WHEREAS this 2,000-acre island offers recreational opportunities and natural features of provincial significance not found within other parks in the Gulf Islands region;

"BE IT RESOLVED that the Canadian Nature Federation urge the provincial government of British Columbia to purchase all remaining privately-owned land on the Island and to establish ecological reserves within a provincial park encompassing the entire Sidney Island."

The issue, which received national attention, is far from dead.

Expanding the present park by spending $300,000 for an additional 105 acres doesn't show much in the way of foresight.

Especially when you consider that the owner was willing to negotiate on the asking price of $3.5 million for the entire 1,785 acres. Even if the asking price was met, the cost per acre would have been less for the whole island.

But then, the trademark of this administration always appears to be knee-jerk reaction to short-term opportunity.

If the provincial government can spend $5 million on developing Lakelse Hot Springs between Terrace and Kitimat, why can't they come up with the necessary capital from their considerable lottery revenue for purchasing Sidney Island?

Creating a major marine park near the major population centres of the province is bound to pay off in the long run as rising fuel costs force people to spend their vacation dollars closer to home.

So how about a second look?

NIBBLES: Island Mountain Ramblers have a number of interesting trips planned for April. Anyone wishing further information or wanting to go on the trip should contact the leader (in brackets after the trip description) at least two days before the departure date.

On April 5-7 they plan a bicycle trip along the northern coast of the Olympic Peninsula to Cape Flattery (Jan and Warrick Whitehead:746-5751 or 748-1374).

Or if you want to try something different, there will be rock climbing at Piper's Lagoon near Nanaimo on April 6 (Lynn Paterson: 753-8958).

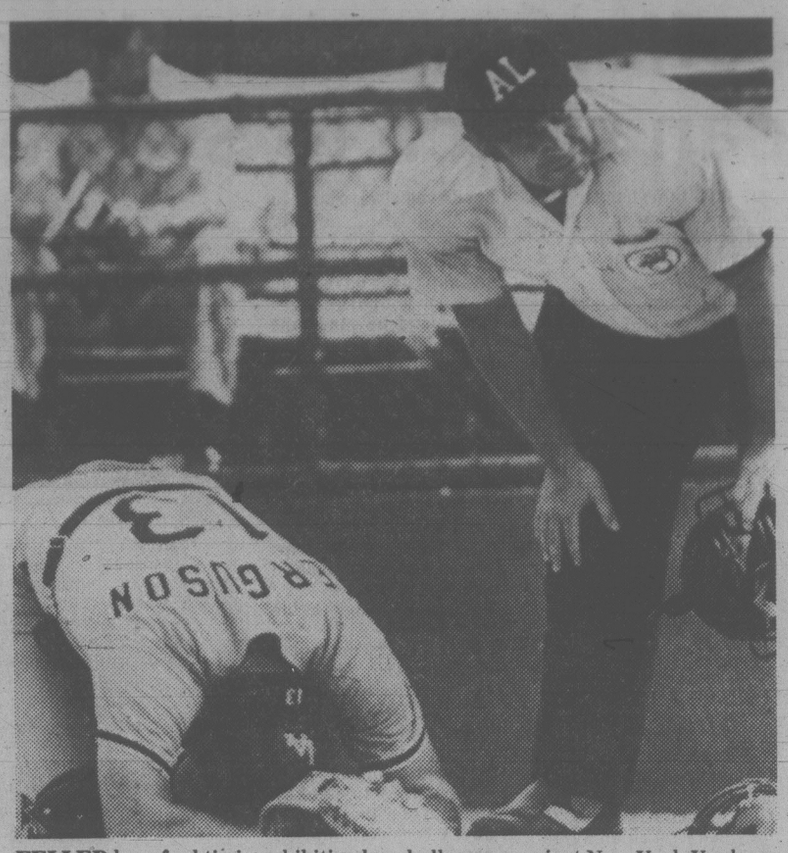

Anyone wanting to go on the summer trek to Yoho National Park or register for the snow school on Mt. Arrowsmith May 3-4 should have their names in before the spring meeting at 1:30 p.m. April 13 at Island Hall in Parksville. Pat Leahy (754-6473 between 7 and 8 a.m.) is handling the Yoho trip and either Brian Johnson (592-6402) or Mike Taylor (748-1309) can provide information on the snow school, which covers the use of ice axes and crampons, glissading, roped climbing, snow belays and avalanche safety.

Other trips planned are a cross-country ski excursion on Mt. Arrowsmith April 20 (Bill Perry: 752-3685) and a fly-in trip to Hot Springs Cove on April 26-27 (Dave Coombs: 387-6387 or 384-6396).

The Players Association has voted to strike remaining games exhibition in its dispute with Major League owners.

Twins, Giants spring best

Times News Services

The exhibition baseball season is prematurely over and Minnesota Twins and San Francisco Giants are make-believe Grapefruit League champions.

The Twins of the American League finished their strike-curtailed exhibition season Tuesday with a 5-3 victory over Chicago White Sox, winding up the spring with the best mark in the majors at 15-6.

The Giants wound up with a 14-7 record, tops among National League teams, despite a 6-4 loss to San Diego Padres.

The remaining 92 games of the exhibition season were cancelled by a vote of the Major League Players Association executive board.

The Twins finished their spring season in stylish fashion, beating the White Sox on Rob Wilfong's two-run triple in the eighth.

Meanwhile, pinch-hitter Rick Sweet's two-run homer in the ninth snapped a 4-4 tie and propelled San Diego over San Francisco and Bob Horner broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run double in the eighth and Brian Asselstine hit two homers and knocked in four runs to pace Atlanta over Houston 7-2.

Ferguson Jenkins and John Henry Johnson limited Philadelphia to five hits as Texas defeated the Phillies, 4-1.

Dave Revering belted his third home run of the exhibition season and Mike Heath had two triples, leading Oakland past Seattle 8-3 in a game stopped in the fifth inning because of high winds.

Fred Lynn's sacrifice fly drove in an unearned, first-inning run that gave Boston a 1-0 victory over Montreal.

Weaver willing to meet idol Ali

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (Reuter) — Promoter Bob Arum said Tuesday Muhammad Ali had agreed to a fight this summer with Mike Weaver, who scored an upset 15th round knockout over John Tate here Monday night to win the World Boxing Association heavyweight championship.

"We've spoken with Ali and his advisers and they want to go ahead with the fight," said Arum, head of Top Rank, which promoted the Weaver-Tate bout in Tate's hometown.

"There are a lot of wheels in motion and we hope to hold the fight in June or July, probably in New Orleans," he said. "We expect to have an announcement next week.

"We think an Ali-Weaver fight would be the hottest fight since Ali and Joe Frazier in Manila," said Arum, who had planned to match Ali with Tate in a $14 million bout if Tate had successfully defended his crown.

"Ali has always been my idol and I never wanted to fight him," said Weaver, 27, who was trailing on the scorecards of all three officials when he knocked Tate unconscious with less than 45 seconds to go in the fight.

"But I want to be a fighting champion and a good champion and I'd be willing to fight Ali and I will beat him," the soft-spoken, self-effacing Weaver told a news conference Tuesday.

Britain's David Green suspended for 60 days

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Maryland Boxing Commission has suspended British fighter David Green from fighting for at least 60 days following his knockout Monday night by the World Boxing Council welterweight champion, Sugar Ray Leonard.

Jack Cohen, executive secretary of the commission, said the suspension would be honored throughout the United States and by all countries that are members of the WBC or the World Boxing Association.

The suspension was ordered until the British champion receives and passes complete neurological tests, brain scans and other medical examinations.

Cohen said the 60-day "medical suspension" was unusual. Ordinarily a fighter is suspended routinely for 30 days after a knockout.

"But this was such a hell of a knockout, we had to take the extra precaution.... Green was already floating in the air unconscious before his head hit the floor," he said.

He was unconscious for several minutes.

If NHL offers aren't rich enough Dave can switch to Switzerland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The demise of the World Hockey Association was supposed to end the bidding war that had made the best young hockey players and their agents rich in the 1970s.

But for Dave Babych, the youngster expected to be the No. 1 pick in this year's National Hockey League draft, there is still an option — in Switzerland.

Babych has spent the last two years in relative obscurity with Portland Winter Hawks of the Western Hockey League, where he earned $275 a month and made interminable bus trips for games in places like Medicine Hat, Alta., and Brandon, Man.

The WHL, a proving ground for potential professional stars, is a junior hockey league that until recent years was confined to Canada before spilling over to Seattle, Wash.; Portland, and Great Falls and Billings in Montana.

Babych's brother, Wayne, a St. Louis Blues forward, also played for Portland. He was the third pick in the NHL draft two years ago.

Before the current season started, the word was out that the younger Babych, a muscular 18-year-old defenceman with a sizzling shot, was the pick of the litter.

Brian Shaw, the Winter Hawks' general manager and Babych's agent, already had been approached by Winnipeg Jets' general manager John Ferguson.

"He wanted to sit down and talk about negotiations," Shaw said. "If they weren't interested they wouldn't have approached us."

"If the National Hockey League doesn't come up with the amount of money we want, he (Babych) has an offer to go to Switzerland," Shaw said. "And he would go. It's a good offer and it would all be tax-free dollars.

"The problem is it's a monopolized market and we don't think that's right," Shaw continued. "If they can't reach an agreement then it goes to arbitration and they (the NHL) pick the arbitrator."

But Babych, who started skating at age two on a rink behind the Babyches' Edmonton home, obviously would rather play in the NHL than in Switzerland.

"When you're a kid in Canada you always want to play in the NHL," he said. "But the only time I really got serious about it was in the last few years. You know, my brother got drafted and he made the NHL and all of that. It sort of seemed realistic that I could make it too."

Shaw says a top draft pick can expect to earn $1 million in his first five years in the NHL.

Babych just laughs at the comparison.

"Bobby Orr? I don't play like Bobby Orr," he said. "He could do everything, you know. He could skate like the wind and could turn on a dime, and I can't."

Although he thinks "most people come to hockey games to see the fights," Babych considers himself a new breed of player.

"I've gotten in two or three fights in my life," said Babych. One look at his 6-foot-2, 205-pound frame and it's easy to see why.

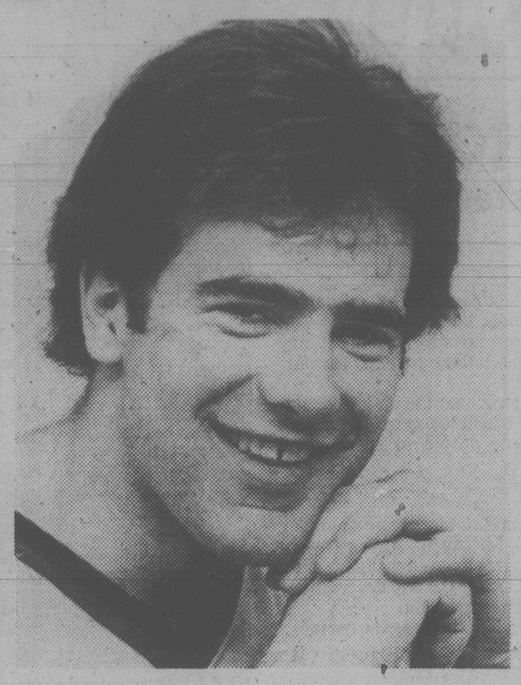

"I don't like fights," he said. "Sometimes you get so frustrated you have to do something. You can let your frustrations out with a nice clean check, too. That's what I try to do....

"I think all the teams now are looking for better skaters," Babych said. "The goons, you don't find them so much anymore."

Babych, however, decided not to play with the Canadian Olympic team.

"Last summer I had a chance," he said. "But there was a little bit of politics involved and I just got hassled. They pressured me one night. They wanted me to give them an answer right then.

"So I don't know, I think I made the right choice because the Canadian team didn't do very well. I could have dropped in the draft quite a bit because when you're going against the greatest players in the world, they could make you look bad."

DAVE BABYCH . . . expected to be top pick

Lorna Pollock named president of bowlers

Lorna Pollock of Victoria, a member of the British Columbia Bowling Hall of Fame, has been elected president of the B.C. Women's Tenpin Bowling Association.

Elected at the organization's annual general meeting in Penticton, Pollock replaces another Victorian, Hazel McLeary, who has held the post all of the 11 years the group has been in existence.

Boycott by equestrians

BERN (AP) — The Swiss Equestrian Federation said Tuesday it will boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow because personal freedom and human rights are not guaranteed in the Soviet Union.

The decision means that Christine Stueckelberger will not defend the Olympic title she won at Montreal in the dressage event four years ago.

Lead boosted

LONDON (Reuter) — Liverpool extended its lead in the English First Division soccer league to six points Tuesday by riding a first-half goal from Scottish international Kenny Dalglish to a 1-0 victory over Stoke City.

Liverpool struggled to find its best form after its 2-0 loss to Tottenham Hotspur in London last Saturday.

In the Second Division, Birmingham moved to within a point of leaders Chelsea by defeating Oldham 2-0. West Ham United, however, went down 2-0 to Cambridge and probably ended whatever chances they had of being promoted to the First Division next season.

Lions sign big backs

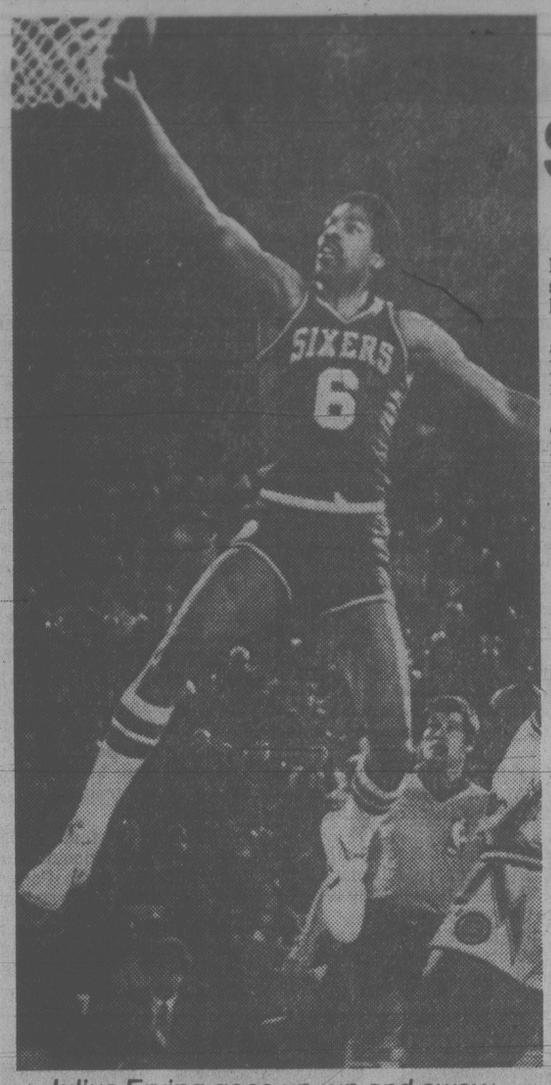

VANCOUVER (CP) — Import running backs Kevin Cole and Lafayette Donnell have signed 1980 contracts with British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League.

The newcomers have considerably more size than the Lions' holdover backs from last season — Larry Key and John Henry White, both about five-foot-10 and about 185 pounds.

Cole is a six-foot-one, 200-pounder from San Jose State who had a five-day trial with the Lions late in the 1979 season. He was signed last year by Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League as a free agent and later released.

Donnell is a six-foot-one, 215-pounder from the University of Nebraska who was taken in the fourth round of the 1978 NFL draft by New York Jets. He was released by the Jets and later had a tryout with the Eagles.

The Lions also will have veteran Canadian Don Taylor and new import Russell Pope as backfield candidates when they begin training camp May 26 at Courtenay.

Julius Erving goes up, up and away

'76ers no longer in a fish bowl; Sonics hurt by late season slump

By The Associated Press

There's been a change in Philadelphia '76ers this season, and Julius Erving likes it.

"Our team isn't living in a fish bowl any more," said Erving, the high-scoring forward who helped the '76ers compile a 59-23 record during the National Basketball Association regular season. That's the best for a Philadelphia team since the 1968 Warriors, led by Wilt Chamberlain, won 62 games.

"The concentration of the players has been much better," added Erving. "You hear half as much as you used to about the Sixers, but most of what you hear is good — much better than in the past."

The Sixers are hoping that the improved attitude will help them in the playoffs, which open tonight when Philadelphia plays host to Washington Bullets in one of four best-of-three, first-round, mini-series.

The other three playoff series also open tonight. In the other Eastern Conference game, it's San Antonio at Houston.

In the West, Portland is at Seattle and Kansas City at Phoenix.

The home teams are reversed for the second game of each series Friday night. Third games, if necessary, would be played Sunday in the cities where the series opened.

A big regional rivalry is between Portland and Seattle. The defending NBA champion Sonics dominated their meetings with Portland this season, winning five of six games, including a 135-104 trouncing Sunday night. All 10 Seattle players who got into the game scored in double figures.

No defending champion has won in 11 years and the Sonics' late-season slump would indicate that trend won't be broken. All the physical ingredients for a title team are there, the Sonics finished with a better record than last year, but that extra spark has been missing.

Coach Jack Ramsay did a fine job to get the Blazers into the playoffs despite a turnover in personnel. The Blazers have fine talent but they haven't played together enough to be rated a title contender.

Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham revamped his starting lineup this season, moving 7-foot-1 Caldwell Jones to a forward spot and going with 6-11 Darryl Dawkins as his regular centre. That alignment has helped Philadelphia become one of the better rebounding teams in the league, Erving has picked up the scoring slack as the only true forward in the starting lineup and forwards Bobby Jones and Steve Mix have contributed off the bench.

If the '76ers have a problem it's in the backcourt, where injured Doug Collins is out for the season.

Houston and San Antonio have developed a heated rivalry in recent seasons, and each beat the other at home in the final week of the season when both were scrambling for playoff spots. They finished with identical 41-41 records, but Houston got the home-court edge.

Seven Vancouver Island girls will be among gymnasts from all over the province competing this weekend in trials at the Sea Island Forum in Richmond to pick a B.C. team to compete in the Canadian National Championships May 15 to 18 in Alma, Quebec.

The Island girls chosen to take part in the trials are Cindy Calkin, Val Hansen, Bev Beres, Rachel Turner and Marny Eng from the Port Alberni Gymnastics Academy and Heather Cameron and Liana Rosetto from the Nanaimo Gymnastics and Acrobatic Academy.

Although B.C. has only Karen Kelsall of Surrey in the senior category, competition is fierce for the seven junior and seven novice berths on the provincial team for the nationals. Calkin, Hansen and Beres will try out for junior places and the other four Island girls will be bidding for novice spots.

The second and final qualifying meet for women gymnasts will be the Elite Provincial Championships for both men and women at the Nanaimo Civic Centre April 19 and 20.

Foremost among the province's men going to the nationals, of course, will be Phillip Delasalle, the country's top gymnast, and Owen Walstrom, named recently as captain of the Canadian Gymnastic Team. Both Victoria men now work and train in Port Alberni.

Walstrom has been invited to take part in an invitational gymnastics meet in Hungary April 10 to 14 and Delasalle will compete in an East German Invitational tournament April 17 to 20.

Canada's shooters take aim at medals

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's shooters haven't won an Olympic medal since 1964. But they are taking aim on the winner's podium at the Moscow Games.

Bud Todd, executive director of the Shooting Federation, says he is sure the Canadian shooters will do well in Moscow.

At the Melbourne Games 16 years ago, Gerald Ouellet won the gold and Gilmor Boa won the bronze in the small-bore rifle prone event.

There are seven Olympic shooting competitions — small-bore rifle prone and three position, rifle running target, rapid-fire pistol, free pistol, Olympic trap and international skeet.

Each country is allowed two entries per event

Thomas Guinn of Windsor, Ont., and Edward Jans of Calgary will most likely be in the free-pistol event while Dr. Jules Sobiran of Omemee, Ont., and Jans will be the rapid-fire entries.

Guinn won an individual bronze and was on the gold medal pistol team with Jans at last year's Pan-American Games and was second in the 1978 world championship air pistol competition. Sobiran, a member of the 1976 Olympic team, won a gold medal at the Edmonton Commonwealth Games.

Four men — Alfons Mayer and Curt Mitchell, both of Kitchener, Ont., Arne Sorensen of Calgary and Robert Cheyne of Vancouver are the leading contenders for the small-bore rifle prone competition and also for the rifle three-position event along with Guy Lorion and Hans Aldhoch, both of Longeueil, Que.

Mayer is a former world champion and won an individual bronze; he joined Sorensen, Lorion and Adlhoch for a silver medal in team competition at the Pan-Ams. Cheyne was second in the 1978 world championships in rifle competition and Mitchell won a bronze in air rifle at the Pan-Ams. Lorion was a surprise gold medalist in the Pan-Ams air rifle and also won a bronze in three-position.

Leading prospects for the running-target team are Ron Alldred of Oshawa and Barry Levi of Victoria, but neither has yet reached Olympic qualification standards.

In Olympic trap, Susan Nattrass of Edmonton, a member of the 1976 Games team and the first women ever to compete in Olympic shooting, is a leading contender with another veteran marksman from Edmonton — John Primrose. Others aiming for a spot on the team are George Leary of Toronto, Marcel duBois of Rosetown, Sask., and Ed Shaske Jr. of Edmonton.

Nattrass has been defending world women's champion for the last five years. Primrose won the gold medal at the Commonwealth Games and a bronze at the Pan-Ams.

In skeet shooting, four men have already reached Olympic standards — Gordon Maksyn of Winnipeg, Donald Kwasnycia of Toronto, Don Johnson of Pickering, Ont., and Brian Gabriel of Kitchener.

Canadians won't be there in these Olympic events

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian volleyball, team handball and field hockey players will have to be satisfied with watching the Moscow Olympics and trying to qualify for the 1984 Games.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Soccer Association, whose Olympic team also failed to qualify for Moscow, is giving serious thoughts to abandoning Olympic competition and concentrating on its World Cup and Youth teams.

The four sports had teams in the Montreal Olympics in 1976 because Canada was the host country. For Moscow they had to qualify through regional playoffs but didn't.

In volleyball, Cuba as usual won the North America qualifying round for men and women. The Canadian men participated in a second qualification tournament but finished fifth and out of contention.

The women decided their team was not strong enough and skipped the second tournament.

Team handball, probably better known to Canadians as borden ball, a roughneck sport that was popular in elementary schools, suffered much the same fate as volleyball.

The men finished second to Cuba in the Americas playoff after the Cubans scored twice in the last few minutes of the game. The handball association did not send its women's team to the playoffs because of a money shortage.

The men's field hockey team, ranked 11th in the world, was runner-up to Argentina in the Americas playoffs and would go to Moscow if that South American country dropped out.

The women's team, which finished eighth in the 1979 world championships, is fifth reserve internationally putting it on the sidelines. Women's field hockey is in the Olympics for the first time this year.

Eric King, executive director of the soccer association, said his sport loses all its promising young players to professional ranks, making it almost impossible to field a competitive Olympic squad.

The 60 Canadians now in the North American Soccer League provide strong talent for the 1982 World Cup in which pros can play. They can't compete in the Olympics.

The association also has an agreement with Labatt Breweries which will provide $500,000 to help prepare its world cup team for a qualifying round later this year with the U.S. and Mexico. "We're now a contender in the North American zone. If we beat either of those countries then we'll be in next year's qualifying play."

Ian Stoddart, executive-director of the volleyball association, said the program for men and women is improving as better players are attracted to the sport.

"Our international ranking has been static for the last few years but it is hard to move much higher than we are because of the calibre of other countries."

The men's team is based in Calgary under the guidance of full-time coach Ken Maeda. The women will have a training camp in Ottawa this summer under the tutelage of Betty Baxter, former national team player and now volleyball coach at the University of Ottawa.

Both teams are entered in a world volleyball tournament to be held in Toronto later this year.

The men's field hockey team won the silver medal at last year's Pan-American Games and many of its members now are training in Vancouver under coach John McBride.

The women's team is coached by Marina van der Mer who has many national team members with her at York University in Toronto. Cathy Broderick of the the University of Alberta is an assistant coach.

The women will be on a tour in Holland and Germany this summer and hope to compete in the 1981 World Cup.

The men are aiming for next year's Intercontinental Cup in Malaysia and the World Cup in Bombay in 1982.

CFL jokes mostly cruel

Times News Services

April 1 may have been a fun day for most people, but many Canadian Football League clubs didn't see much to laugh about Tuesday.

It was zero hour for several clubs and 11 players — some serious about leaving — officially became free agents.

"Naturally their CFL teams hope they will be able to re-sign them," CFL secretary Greg Fulton said. "Some like Mike Nelms and Glenn Robinson will probably go to the National Football League."

Nelms, the outstanding Ottawa Rough Riders defensive back, and Robinson, of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, were among several CFL players who played out the option year of their contracts in 1979.

Fulton noted that some free agents will probably look elsewhere in the CFL for employment this year, opening the way for talks to compensate their former teams.

In this case, if the club's can't agree on compensation, "which is tantamount to a trade," Fulton said CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur will decide who goes where.

"Jake hasn't exercised that authority too often," said Fulton. "Most clubs realize the assets they have and try to straighten out their own problems."

Besides Nelms and Robinson, others who gained free-agency status Tuesday were Ottawa's Larry Brune and Peter Stenerson; Gary Robinson, Toronto Argonauts; Zac Henderson and Emil Nielsen, Hamilton; Drew Taylor and Joey Walters, Saskatchewan Roughriders; Larry Tittley, Calgary Stampeders, and Andre Anderson, British Columbia Lions.

Several players governed by an old CFL players' contract will hit the free-agent market on April 15, including four Stampeders — Willie Burden, Al Burleson, Ollie Bakken and, most notably, quarterback John Hufnagel.

Meanwhile, David Green, Montreal Alouettes' running back who was the CFL's most outstanding player last year, says he wants to play for the Argonauts.

"I'd like to be traded to Toronto because I really think I could help the Argos' program," Green said in an interview Tuesday. "I think they could use an athlete like me to pick up the pace when things are down. Not that they don't have their own sparkplugs, but I think they really need someone like me.

The reason is money.

Green is under contract to the Alouettes through the end of next season, his option year. But an agreement between his agent, Andrew Benson, and Bob Greary, Montreal general manager, called for renegotiation should Green win the Schenley Award as top player, which he did.

Greary has offered Green a five-year contract with an salary that peaks at $95,000 in the final year.

Greary has said the offer is final. Green says it's not enough.

"That's nowhere near the $1-million, long-term contract I want," Green said.

However, Greary said he won't trade Green.

"I will not meet his demands. I think we've offered him a very good contract. He's a good back, I don't want to knock him, but I have a budget and I think he should try to understand that."

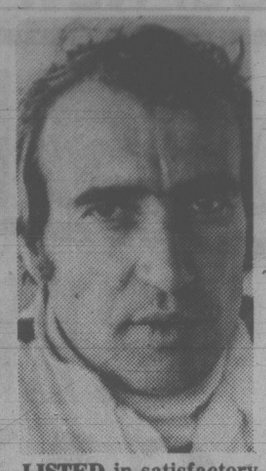

SFU forward singled out

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Simon Fraser forward Jay Triano has been named to the Little all-Northwest college basketball all-star team for the second year in a row.

Triano, a 6-foot-4 junior from Niagara Falls, Ont., who averaged 21.2 points per game for the Burnaby university, was the only player named to the team for two years running.

Switch to Express

LONDON (AFP) — Coventy City has announced that Welsh international Don Ardiello, 22, will join Detroit Express of the North American Soccer League.

LISTED in satisfactory but stable condition at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach, Calif., Formula One race car driver Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland was still without movement in his legs Tuesday — two days after a 260-kilometre-an-hour crash in the Long Beach Grand Prix and five hours of spinal surgery.

B.C. trotter tops

Three women golfers have added incentive

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — JoAnne Carner is unhappy, Nancy Lopez Melton is happy again, and Sandra Post is in love — and that could all spell trouble for the other women golfers in the $305,000 Winners Circle tournament which opens Thursday.

Carner's distress stems from missing the cut for the first time in her career last week in the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Costa Mesa, Calif. Lopez Melton is pleased because she won the event, ending a six-month victory drought. And Post has a thing for the Mission Hills layout.

Those three, even without added motivation, are considered the players to beat in the tournament.

"I love that course and it loves me," said Post, who has demonstrated her contention by winning the last two Winners Circles, the LPGA's richest tournament.

"Mission Hills is the type of course that the more you play it, the better you play it," said the Oakville, Ont., native.

While Lopez Melton and Carner have contrasting incentives to play well, Post said there's one big incentive for all in this tourney.

"I think I get jazzed up for the tournament because its financial clout make it the most important tournament we play."

The winner receives $37,000 and a new car, and Post's victory in the tournament last year helped her finish second on the money-winnings list to Lopez Melton. Post collected a total of $178,750, Lopez Melton $197,000.

New boot league unveiled in east

HALIFAX (CP) — The formation of a six-team Atlantic Soccer League was announced here Tuesday by league chairman Nick Spiropoulos.

"The Atlantic Soccer League consists of the best teams from the Maritime Provinces," he said, "and before long we will also have the best teams from Newfoundland as well."

The season will begin June 1 and conclude September 7. Each team will play a ten game schedule.

The competing teams this season are Saint John, N.B., Drydocks; Charlottetown Tradewind; three teams from the Halifax-Dartmouth area — Olands, Scotia Olympics, and the Nova Scotia Canada Games team — and a team from New Waterford, N.S.

The Big Mon dropped by Jays

DUNEDIN, Fla. (CP) — The Big Mon, designated hitter Rico Carty, has been given his unconditional release by Toronto Blue Jays.

The veteran Carty had been rumored expendable after a sub-par training camp with the American League baseball team.

Purdy's gives the Easter Bunny a hand.

Easter means Purdy's own Chocolate Cameos, chocolate bunnies in all sizes, and most of all, Purdy's Easter Eggs. We've been making them the same way for over 70 years - like this:

Dairy Cream Eggs - with Yolk Centre

Candy cream (18% B.F.). Sugar. Invert sugar. Water. Butter. Salt. Invertase (enzyme). Vanilla. Yellow and orange yolk colouring.

Method:

Place 1 gal. of candy cream and the quart of water into a large polished copper kettle. Add all ingredients except the invertase and vanilla and begin cooking with fast fire, stirring constantly with wooden paddle. Wash down sides of kettle while boiling to prevent any sugar crystal formation. Turn down fire at 235°F and turn off as final temperature of 242°F is reached. Remove from fire and pour into the five foot diameter cast iron cream beater, (designed in 1902!). Cool to 105°F. Add invertase (enzyme) and vanilla. Start cream beater, creaming up the centre.

Remove ⅓ of the cream centre. Colour to a yolk colour. Divide remaining ⅔ into 2 parts. Place the 3 parts in the extruder hopper with the yellow part in the centre. Pull out the centre, creating the famous Purdy's yolk centred cream egg. Coat the eggs with Purdy's pure dark chocolate.

Easter Sunday is April 6.
But you could sample an egg early.

Alderman fails to cut pay hike

Capital Regional District board members will keep their more than 22 per cent pay hikes, despite efforts of Esquimalt aldermen Colin Blair Monday night to get Mayor Ken Hill to ask the board to reconsider.

Blair doesn't believe the board's pay hike should exceed the six or seven per cent pay raises normally given municipal workers.

But Mayor Hill said at a council meeting he found it difficult to argue against the increase because CRD business is taking far more of his time than he had been led to believe, and he's been taking his holiday time to attend board meetings.

Only Blair voted for his own motion asking the mayor to raise the subject at the next CRD meeting.

Opening lead — seven of hearts.

There are hands where you'd swear declarer must have peeked at the defenders' cards to have played as well as he did. But, in most such cases, declarer's plays are found to be based on nothing more nor less than plain common sense.

Consider this deal where South played his cards in a way that might seem abnormal — but made the contract as a result. He won the diamond lead with the king, played a club to the queen — on which West played the ten — and led a club back. When East followed with the six, declarer finessed the eight. When the eight held, he was home with ten tricks.

Had South played the clubs less efficiently — that is, had he simply cashed two high clubs in the hope of finding a normal 3-2 division of the suit — he would have failed in his mission. At best, he could have scored eight tricks.

Declarer's unusual club finesse was super sound. He realized that to make the contract he would have to score four club tricks, and he implemented that aim by taking a deep finesse on the second round of clubs. He was willing to lose a club trick to West — and so guarantee the contract — since West could do him no harm even if the finesse lost.

He was unwilling to run the risk of East's having four clubs, because in that case he would find the contract unmakable — due to the danger of East's later taking the lead and returning a diamond.

South did not really expect the eight to take the trick — the odds were greatly against winning the double finesse — but he realized that, win or lose, the finesse would bring the contract home.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 3, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get facts concerning money, income and investment potential. One close to you, possibly partner or mate, is concerned with financial prospect. Dig deep for information, utilize past experience and make most of recent lessons. Reject superficial explanations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid premature starts — round out projects and tie loose ends. Aries, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. You may be asked to consider a long-range legal commitment. Take your time! Avoid direct confrontations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight originality, personal magnetism and confidence in your own special ability. One who depends upon you pays meaningful compliment. Emphasis on employment, health and pets. A Leo associate provides lesson in showmanship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Intuitive intellect serves as reliable guide. Rise above petty annoyances, red tape and envious colleagues. Young person confides problem. Don't cast first stone! You have choice now between contentment and intrigue. Aquarian could help show the way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can extricate self from past obligation which was foolish in first place. Have courage enough to better your own position. Versatility and humor figure prominently. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles. You succeed on "third try."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Exchange information with one who shares money interest. Accent on change, travel, intensified relationship, written material. Gemini, Virgo Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You get what you need—by asking questions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on independence, new start, exciting contacts, more self-awareness. Family member makes conciliatory gesture. Be receptive. Taurus, Libra and another Scorpio figure prominently. You will be at right place at right time!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Welcome opportunity for second wind — meditate, know that being alone can be a blessing and has nothing to do with loneliness. Play cards close to chest, don't tell all you know. If discreet, you pave way to victory!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can win friends and influence people — key is to get organized, to bring priorities into focus. What had been elusive, including money, becomes more readily available. Another Capricorn figures in intriguing scenario. You will have reason to celebrate!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish what you start, perceive potential, take aim towards goal. Superior is willing to give you benefit of doubt. Career advancement is a very real possibility. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. In matters of speculation, stick with number 9.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on making known your views, bridging distance and language barriers. Leo, Virgo and Aquarius natives figure in scenario. You are going places! Philosophical concepts come into sharp, clear focus. Good news is connected with manuscript.

IF APRIL 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY You are versatile, artistic, an innovator and your ideas, concepts have mark of originality. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. October could be your highlight, "comback" month of 1980. You are very conscious of weight, body image, more so than the average person. You have a fondness for art objects and gourmet dining. You often scatter your forces, display headstrong tendencies and act on impulse. You travel in May and social life accelerated. During this year, a relationship is tested—truth will make you strong.

Before the judge

A high school principal was criticized by Judge Blake Allan in provincial court Tuesday for only warning a student he caught smoking marijuana on school grounds.

Allan made his comments after 19-year-old Jaswinder Singh Sandhu, 270 Rudlin, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel Elke Kluge told the court the principal of Victoria High caught Sandhu smoking marijuana about 2:30 p.m. March 7.

Kluge said the principal had warned Sandhu several times previously about the same thing.

After imposing a $150 fine on Sandhu, the judge said: "I don't think it's good enough for a principal of a high school to no more than warn the man."

Hogg ordered a pre-sentence report and remanded Paul Robert Fenton until April 21 for sentencing.

Fenton was convicted of assaulting Donna Elaine Riel during a Junior Ranks Mess dance.

Evidence was heard that Fenton, a private in the Third Battalion, Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry Brigade, asked Riel for a dance but was declined.

About 15 minutes later, some drinks were spilled at the table where the two were seated, words were exchanged, and the woman began pouring Fenton's beer over his head.

She was about to pour a second glass on his lap when Fenton gave her a backhand in the stomach. Riel suffered bruises and a small cut on her neck.

Fenton denied he broke a beer glass and pointed it at the woman.

Hogg noted that Fenton's evidence was that he hit Riel "hard enough to move her out of the area." But the judge said it was astonishing Riel remained at the dance for another three hours.

Hogg ruled the force used was far more than necessary and said Fenton could have disengaged himself at any point.

'Old hand' fined for valium theft

A self-confessed drug addict with a criminal record spanning 30 years was fined $750 in county court Tuesday after being found guilty of breaking and entering and theft.

D.W. Thomson, 47, of 301-829 Admirals, was charged with breaking into James Bay Pharmacy, 230 Menzies, and stealing valium and other drugs valued at $175.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart told Thomson "for a person inclined to commit criminal offences, you're getting very old."

Men his age with similar criminal histories are either in prison or have given up breaking the law, said Stewart.

Thomson also was given two years probation.

"Usually its young men who justify a probation order, not an old hand like you," the judge said.

He dismissed defence counsel Peter Freeman's contention Thomson was an innocent bystander victimized because of his record.

Stewart said Thomson's testimony was not believable.

Thomson, a steam fitter at CFB Naden since last July, told the court he was waiting for a bus near the pharmacy when the the break-in occurred.

Constables Murrey Kennett and Keith Terlson said Thomson was arrested minutes after Terlson found a tire iron in some bushes near the pharmacy.

Florence Strom, 401-425 Simcoe, said she called police twice, once after watching two men break the store's front window and again when she observed a man of Thomson's build throw what she called a "pry" into some bushes.

A man of Thomson's build stayed outside and acted as lookout while a younger man went inside the pharmacy, Mrs. Strom said.

The other man is Peter MacLean who pleaded guilty last May.

Thomson said he met MacLean in jail three or four years ago, but said it was a coincidence the two happened to be at the same place that night.

The judge said he found such a coincidence remarkable.

In another county court case Tuesday a Saanich couple was sentenced in connection with stolen jewelry worth more than $20,000.

Susan Nancy Davies, 20, of 83-B Sims, was jailed 60 days and her husband Rick, 22, fined $500.

They were charged with two counts of knowingly possessing stolen jewelry.

Judge Stewart was told by defence counsel R.D. Wilson full compensation had been made to the stores.

But the judge said restitution is not the governing factor.

"The offenders sought to dispose of the goods for some considerable value," he noted.

It would be easy to dispense with the case in view of the comparative youth of the pair and their previous clean record, if not for the continuing nature of the offence, the judge said.

But the accused also appeared to have deep religious beliefs.

"And they appeared to all as completely honest and completely trustworthy. This aggravated the offence."

The judge said Mrs. Davies would receive a more substantial penalty because of her major role.

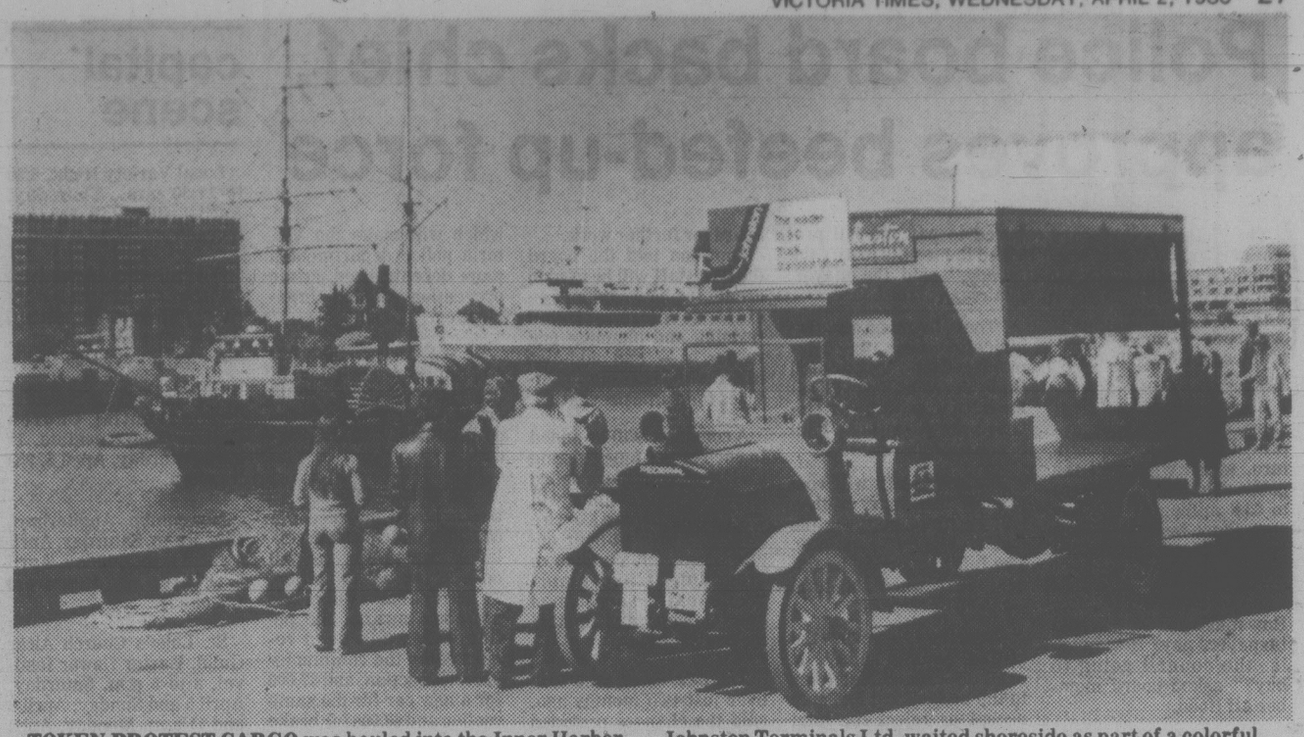

"The custodial sentence I am about to impose is short, although no sentence is short to a person who has not experienced that before."

Steel man heads employers

VANCOUVER (CP) — M.C.D. Hobbs, chairman and chief executive officer of Western Canada Steel Ltd., has been elected chairman of the Employers' Council of B.C.

Hobbs also is general manager at Vancouver for Cominco Ltd.

G.F. MacFarlane, chairman of B.C. Telephone Co., was elected vice-chairman at the council's annual meeting.

TOKEN PROTEST CARGO was hauled into the Inner Harbor Tuesday aboard replica of the SS Beaver, the first steamship on the B.C. coast. A vintage truck and driver Reg Potts of Johnston Terminals Ltd. waited shoreside as part of a colorful stunt by the firm to underline need for more adequate service between V.I. and the mainland. (Bill Halkett photo)

Les Coward elected

Also elected at the fourth annual meeting were Dave Moore, vice-president; Eric Dixon, treasurer; Victor Gadbsy and Randy Rigets, directors of education; Alan Reynolds, monthly newsletter editor, and Robert Harris, program and publicity director.

The institute is completing plans for the incorporation of formal education in naval architecture in the engineering curriculum of post secondary institutions, which could include arcticling for five years. Graduates of the total course would achieve the status of PNA (Professional Naval Architect).

Police board backs chief, approves beefed-up force

The Victoria police board Tuesday made a few budget cuts totalling $40,000 but gave Chief William Snowdon what he really wanted — 10 new constables and six civilian employees.

Board members first were hesitant about approving the major expenditure, which will swell the police department's budget to $5.8 million or 14.3 per cent above last year's, but agreed when Mayor Bill Tindall gave it his support.

"These are the problems. How much can the dear old taxpayers pay? How much is the council going to buy?" asked board member Alf Hood.

"I think the taxpayers of this city are more than prepared to pay the bill provided the results justify the money," said the mayor, chairman of the board.

"There has been a strong indication from the community that they wanted these services," said Phil Fawcett, who said the board should pass the budget on to city council.

The new staff will cost $139,395 this year, as they will be hired only for the last five months of 1980. The full impact will be felt next year when the total cost will be $303,000.

Council was to review the police budget today. It can't alter individual items in the budget, but can only accept or reject the total figure. Rejection means it goes back to the police board for further work.

Snowdon told the board the new staff will be used to create two new sections — staff development and training and planning and research — and add two officers to community services for crime prevention.

A constable will be added to each of the four existing platoons to put more police on the street. Civilians will be hired to make the switchboard a 24-hour operation (now it shuts down at midnight and emergency calls sometimes have to wait) and to staff the new sections.

The new chief, who took over just two months ago, said the changes provided in the budget will be only the first over several years which will make the Victoria police department a more decentralized, crime prevention-oriented organization.

"I see this as the first step in a progression of improvements in the delivery of police services in the community," said Snowdon.

The cuts made by the police board included $7,000 for a television surveillance system for the jail cells at the police station, $7,500 for a survey of public attitudes towards the police which had been requested by the community services section, and $7,000 for a new car for the same section and $8,000 for brake servicing machinery for the police garage.

Alderman opposes fire-fight takeover

Ald. Colin Blair of Esquimalt said today letting the Victoria Fire Department take over the municipality's firefighting services would be a bad move.

Mayor Ken Hill said Tuesday he expects to hear from the city soon on a proposal by Esquimalt to start negotiations for a contract service.

The municipality, whose policemen have doubled as firemen for more than 20 years, now pays about $350,000 a year for fire protection. The police union wants the two functions separated.

Blair didn't dispute Hill's estimate that having Victoria do the job would cost Esquimalt about $600,000 a year based on the city's current $40 per capita cost.

But he doesn't agree with the mayor's contention that the cost of the municipality setting up its own department would be about the same as a contract with the city.

Blair said that although the cost of Esquimalt running its own show would be about $600,000, there would be a deduction of $270,000 — the salaries and bonuses now paid to policemen for firefighting.

The net increase of running a separate Esquimalt fire department then, would be about $330,000.

"It seems to me that the operating costs of going with Victoria would cost the Esquimalt taxpayer almost $250,000 more than having our own fire department," Blair said.

"It should also be remembered that Esquimalt has what must be considered the best deal in Canada as far as firefighting goes."

He referred to the 48-member fire department at CFB Dockyard that is available for firefighting in Esquimalt virtually free of charge.

The Dockyard unit charges only when it's called out and Blair discovered the average payment recently has been about $6,000 a year.

Blair is also worried about control of firefighting costs slipping out of the hands of Esquimalt's elected representatives.

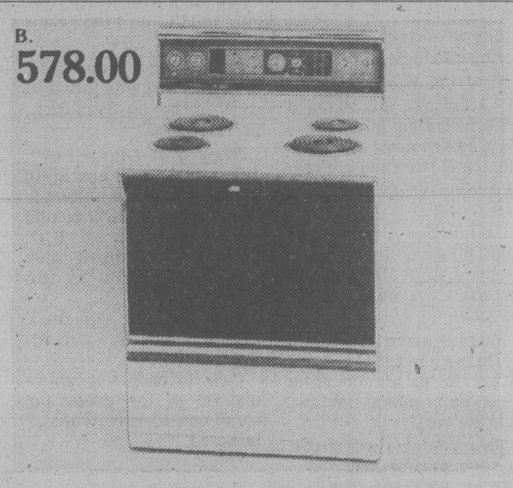

"I think once costs are set up outside the municipality, they tend to escalate rapidly as can be readily seen by the Capital Region budgets."

Sid Conn and his wife, Elenor, want to be the first persons to fly over the North Pole in a hot-air balloon. The Calgary couple will try to do it Sunday, the 71st anniversary of the visit to the pole by Robert Perry, the U.S. Navy commander. Conn, 37, who owns a downtown audio store, doesn't expect flying conditions to be different than those over Calgary, "although the air will be cleaner and there won't be any danger of hitting a building or one of those big cranes." Any other problems? Well, special arrangements had to be made with the North American Air Defence Command "because we don't want their rockets or planes shooting us down."

Illustrator Alberto Vargas is 84 and he thought his days of painting those scantily-clad women in Playboy magazine were over. But someone with "something special" persuaded him to do one last Vargas Girls portrait. That someone was Bernadette Peters, and her portrait appears on the cover of her first record album, Gee Whiz. How did she talk him into it? She just went to his California retreat, asked him to do one more; he took one look and said: "You are a Vargas Girl." She sat five times, paid an undisclosed fee and got to keep the original painting.

Any time you get something going 25,000 miles an hour, and it's in a vacuum, and you launch it on something that's got 6 million pounds of fuel in it, you'd have to be crazy to believe that's safe. It's not safe ... It's risky, but that's part of what makes life worthwhile."

Maureen McTeer will be officially admitted to the Law Society of Upper Canada later this month after passing her bar examinations. The wife of former prime minister Joe Clark was informed of the good news when she returned to Ottawa from a three-week vacation in Hawaii and California.

Dear Abby:

I've been going with this man for the past year and I am very fond of him. I met him in church. He is thoughtful, kind, spiritual, generous and very honest. He also has a beautiful garden.

Last Christmas I gave him a statue of St. Francis of Assisi in a small grotto, and I had our finest nursery plant ivy and holly in it. They also added a plastic leaf of poinsettia. My friend had just returned from a church retreat, and I thought my gift would be appropriate for his garden.

When I gave it to him, he said, "Well, in the first place, I don't like religious statues, and in the second place, I hate fake flowers. I can't believe you would spend money to get that tacky thing."

Abby, I was shocked. All I could think of to say was, "I love St. Francis of Assisi, so if you don't want it, I'll keep it, and you can go pick out a birdbath for your gardan."

Now I am having second thoughts. Should I keep the statue and let him pick out a birdbath? Or should I tell him this is his gift — he can take it or leave it.

J.D.

Dear J.D.:

You may have second thoughts, but you've already offered to keep St. Francis and let your rude and ungrateful friend pick out a birdbath, so I think you're stuck for the birdbath.

Dear Abby:

I've read that Vitamin E is supposed to work wonders in boosting a person's sexual performance. Is there any truth in that?

On a scale of 1 to 10, I'd say I'm about a 2.

Dear Needs Help:

If you believe Vitamin E will "work wonders" — it could.

Dear Abby:

I am planning my wedding and have a very important decision to make. I am 28, and this is my first and (I hope) only wedding, and I want it to be perfect. I am having six bridesmaids, a maid of honor and a matron of honor.

All the girls in my wedding party are either a size 8 or 10 — with the exception of the girl who should be my matron of honor, who is at least a size 20. I was her maid of honor when she was married four years ago. She has always been a little on the plump side, but since her marriage she has gained about 40 pounds.

I hate to exclude her from my wedding party, because we grew up together and she has been my closet and dearest friend, but I don't want to embarrass her or myself on my wedding day.

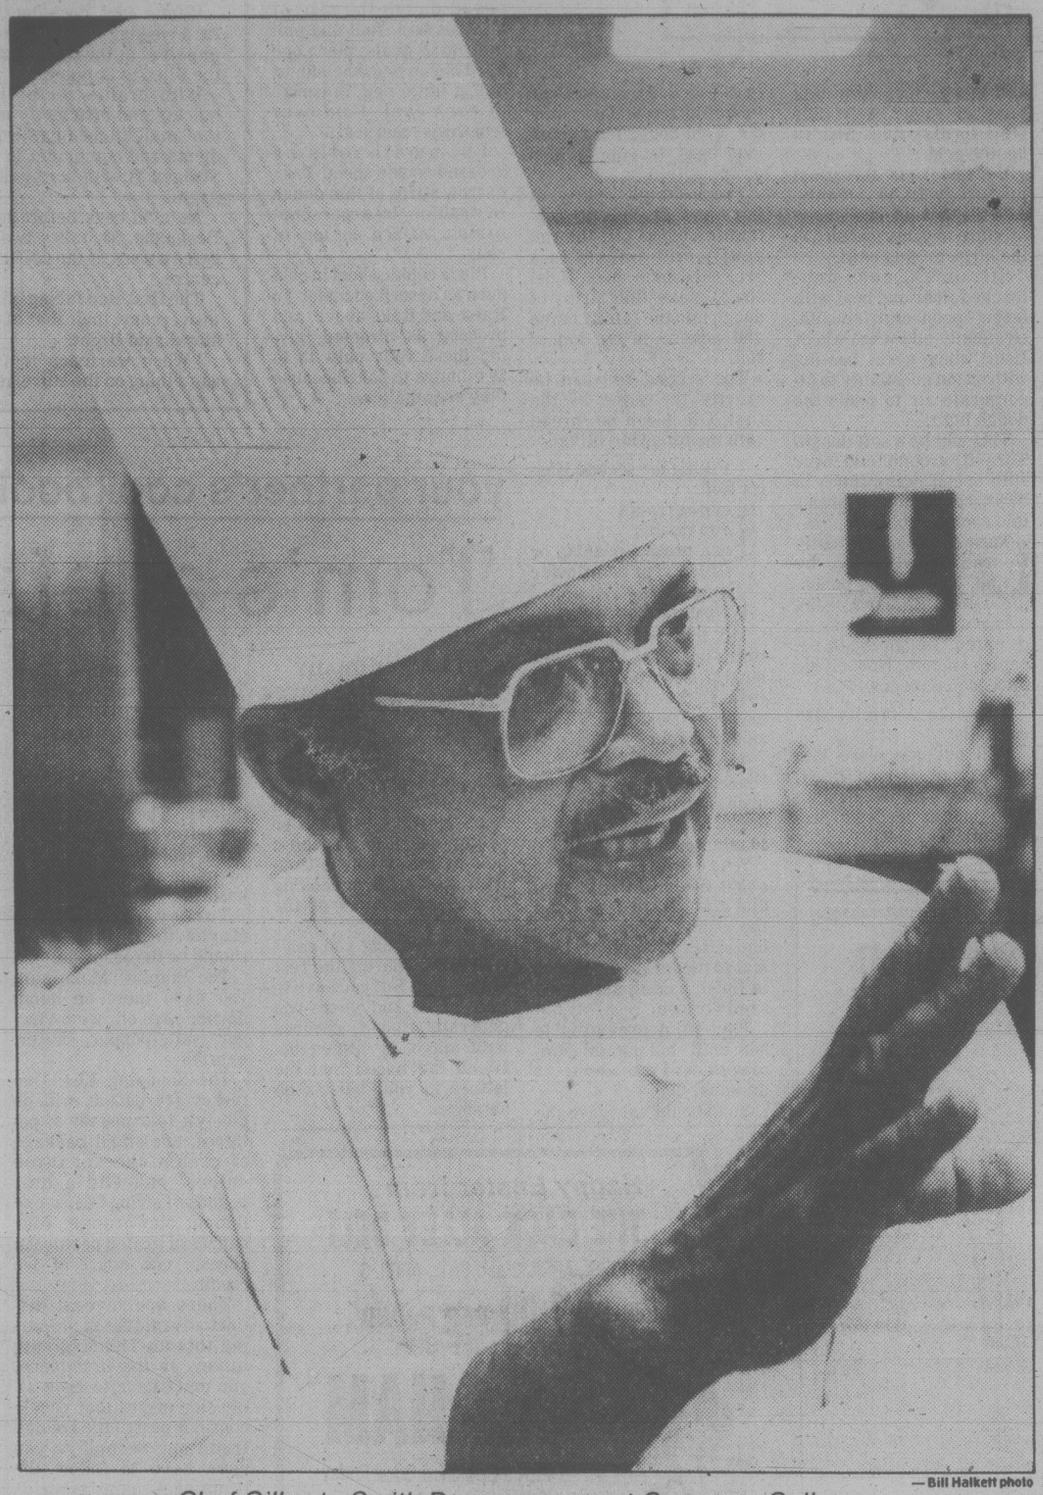

What do you think?

Undecided Bride

Dear Bride:

Ask your closest and dearest friend to be your matron of honor and don't give it another thought. True beauty comes in all sizes.

Chef Gilberto Smith Duquesne . . . at Camosun College

By PAT DUFOUR

The man who has titillated the tastebuds of such notables as Pierre Elliot Trudeau, Fidel Castro and Nikita Khruschev waited for the verdict.

The place was Camosun College. The occasion was a dinner hosted by North Douglas Distributors Ltd. With few exceptions the guests were some of Victoria's best-known chefs.

The verdict was unanimous. The dinner, preared under the watchful eye of "Chef Smith," was superb. It featured seafood from the Cuban-owned Caribex Seafood Ltd.

Chef Smith at 60 has been cooking up a storm for 43 years, 20 of them as master chef. He apprenticed in a Chinese restaurant in Havana, then a Jewish one, followed by French.

Over the years Chef Smith, who had "a Canadian grandfather, a French grandfather and two African grandmothers", has cooked in many countries, including France, Italy, Switzerland, Spain, Japan, Belgium, Germany, Britain and the Soviet Union.

He has prepared meals for Trudeau, both in Ottawa and Havana. As for Castro, Chef Smith says he can cook lobster to equal any done by a chef.

Chef Smith is a member of the French and Japanese Culinary Aacademies and counsellor of the National Institute of Fisheries of Cuba. He represented Cuba and won a special prize at the culinary Olympics, held in Germany in 1976.

Chef Smith says it's important not to overcook shrimp. To cook frozen shrimp, bring a large pot of water to boil and when water is boiling vigorously put the shrimp in the pot.

When the water begins to reboil remove shrimp immediately and place in a pan of cold water.

SHRIMP COCKTAIL WITH CHEF SMITH'S SAUCE

In sufficient boiling water put the following ingredients for five minutes:

Juice and peel of one lemon
1 bay leaf
2 tablespoons salt
2 tablespoons vinegar
6 peppercorns

Add shrimp and when water starts boiling again count three minutes. Take out of water, cool and peel the shrimps.

Sauce

Mix together:

5 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons ketchup
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon garlic powder
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
Juice from two lemons

To serve place about 13 shrimps in four-ounce cup per serving; cover with sauce.

LOBSTER A LA CARIBBEAN

One fresh pineapple
1 precooked lobster
1 cup mayonnaise
Diced celery
Salt and pepper
Fresh lime juice (half a lime).

Remove lobster meat from shell and cut in small pieces.

Cut pineapple in two. Remove the fruit from each section, leaving the leaves attached to the shell. Core and slice the fruit into bite-size pieces.

Combine diced celery, lobster meat and pineapple pieces with mayonnaise.

Add lime juice, season with salt and pepper to taste and fill pineapple halves with mixture.

BUCCANEER LOBSTER

2 defrosted lobster tails
1 onion
half green pepper
Lime juice
2 cloves garlic
10-ounce can stewed tomatoes
1 small can red pimiento
1 cup salad oil
4 large mushrooms
Paprika
¼ cup dry white wine or sherry
Salt and pepper
Tabasco sauce

Cut lobster tails crosswise in ¾-inch wide rings. Add salt, pepper and lime juice.

Brown lobster in ½ cup of salad oil. Brown garlic cloves in rest of the oil. Add chopped onion and small diced green pepper.

Add paprika and stewed tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper and add Tabasco sauce to taste.

Combine with lobster. Simmer 8 to 10 minutes.

CIMMARON SHRIMP IN CHILI SAUCE

2½ pounds shrimp
½ pound onions
2 Chili peppers
3 cloves garlic
1 teaspoon paprika
1 cup vegetable oil
1½ cups peeled tomatoes
1 cup dry sherry
½ cup red peppers
2 lemons
A few drops of Tabasco sauce
Salt and pepper.

Peel and clean shrimp. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice.

Using ½ cup of oil, prepare a sauce from finely chopped garlic, diced onions and peppers, paprika, tomatoes and sherry, adding salt and pepper to taste. Cook gently for 20 minutes.

In the remainder of the oil, toss the shrimp on a high flame for 3 to 4 minutes.

Home 'chefs' form club for food and friendship

VANCOUVER (CP) — Good food and good wines at affordable prices — that was the idea behind the gourmet clubs which sprang up in communities across Canada in the 1960s.

But a British Columbia group has added a new dimension to the idea. It's the amateur chefs of North Vancouver, a branch of that municipality's Newcomers' Club.

"It's a great way to get to know people," says Joyce Mulligan, the group's convener, "particularly if you're new to the community.

"And besides, it ensures that you get out for dinner with your husband at least once a month."

Approximately 30 couples belong to the group at present. Because of the numbers involved, considerable organization is required at the start of the year.

Their schedule is drawn up much like a bowling league, rotating the couples so they meet new people at each dinner. Groups of four couples meet on the third Saturday of the month in a designated home.

This year the "chefs" are exploring the cuisines of different areas — such as Russia, South Africa, the South Seas, Greece, India and Mexico. On some nights the husbands cook and choose their own themes.

"We try to keep the meals as authentic as possible," Mrs. Mulligan says. "The various embassies and cultural centres have been extremely helpful in supplying ideas. Then we research various cookbooks for recipes.

"The hostess decides on the menu and contacts the other couples involved. She supplies the main meat course, while the appetizers, vegetables and dessert are split between the couples.

"The host supplies the pre-dinner drinks, the others are assigned wine or liqueur, choosing selections from the featured country."

The most popular dishes are compiled in a cookbook at the end of the year so club members can add to their personal recipe collections.

Most members are sorry when they have to leave the club. Because it's a newcomers' group, membership is limited to three years.

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

One of the great problems confronting doctors who are treating elderly, undernourished patients is the difficulty in getting them to eat. Malnutrition can sometimes become a desperate problem when patients simply refuse to eat, and reject the food that is presented to them.

It is well known that some elderly people lose their sensitivity to taste and smell and consequently find eating a bore. To compensate for this, doctors, in desperation, are sometimes compelled to resort to intravenous feedings and other methods of forcing food intake.

At the Duke University School of Medicine, Dr. Susan Schiffman has tried an interesting approach to this problem. She has begun to use strong-tasting flavor-enhancers and safe chemical additives in food. She finds that these enhancers can restore appetite in some of the elderly patients.

Hyaline membrane disease is a great threat to some premature infants. This condition is due to a strange lack of development in the protective lining of the bronchial tubes. The newborn infant does not have a free flow of oxygen to the bloodstream and quickly develops complications that are severe — often fatal.

A group of Japanese physicians has recently found that it is possible to preserve the life and health of premature infants by introducing a special tube of artificial coating to the linings of the bronchial tubes. In a recent report in the excellent British medical journal, The Lancet, the initial studies were most heartening.

Although a warning cannot be really classed as hopeful news, it nevertheless deserves emphasis. Pointing out a special danger may indeed create the hope of preventing an unexpected source of trouble.

It was recently found that the drug acetaminophen can be highly toxic and dangerous to habitual drinkers of alcohol. This drug is now being used extensively by those who cannot tolerate aspirin. Dr. Charles S. Lieber of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine arrived at the conclusion that acetaminophen, when taken in combination with several beers and a few drinks of liquor, can cause toxic changes in the liver. This hidden threat is particularly marked because some commercial "hangover remedies" contain acetaminophen.

Alcohol is a drug, and as a drug may not always combine well with other drugs that the alcohol drinker is taking. Care must be taken to ensure that adverse effects do not result.

Egg hunt reaches table

hilda beastall

Easter egg hunting can take place at any Easter meal you wish, at home, by making an especially good bread with hard boiled eggs hidden inside.

This type of festive bread may have had its origins as Easter treats in southern European countries. I have met people from the Azores Islands (of Portuguese origins) who were familiar with the custom.

Not only children but their elders will get a lift from these Easter Rolls, especially if the rolls are "named". If gifted with nimble fingers, you can form each person's name in thin dough, arranged on the top of each small roll. This bakes in a slightly darker shade of brown than the roll. Personalized egg rolls make the occasion a more personal event for everyone.

To serve at table, the rolls are placed in a wide basket or on a big ornamental china plate. A sharp pronged serving fork is used to spear each roll when the right owner finds it for himself or herself.

Make a family size Easter Egg Roll from the bread dough recipe and one dozen small Rolls; or make another family size Easter Fruit Roll in place of the small egg rolls.

Plan the use of the dough to suit your own needs. Just divide the dough into two equal portions and use each portion as desired.

The bread making is easy and quick by the method described; the beating of the dough takes the place of much of the kneading. And the method of raising the Rolls in the oven does away with the long periods of waiting for them to rise before going into the oven. Follow the suggestions closely if this is your first time using these methods. You soon become accustomed to the procedures.

EASTER ROLL BREAD

¼ cup warm water
1 tsp sugar
1 Tbsp yeast (or 1 pkt.)
1 cup hot water
¼ cup skim milk powder
¼ cup soft margarine
2 Tbsp sugar
1 tsp salt
2 small eggs, beaten
2½ cups unbleached flour
1½ cups wholewheat flour
½ cup wheat germ
extra ½ cup unbleached flour as required

Measure warm water into large, warm mixing bowl. Add sugar and stir. Sprinkle yeast on surface and let work in a warm place.

Meanwhile into small bowl measure hot water; add margarine, skim milk powder, sugar, salt. Stir well to dissolve. Stir in beaten eggs.

By this time the yeast mixture will be creamy. Add the now lukewarm egg mixture to yeast mixture in the large mixing bowl.

Stir in 2½ cups unbleached flour and beat with large spoon until smooth. Gradually add wholewheat flour, wheat germ, beating with spoon constantly to incorporate air to make the dough light.

This will be a soft dough. Turn it around and over with spoon many times in bowl, collecting all pieces into a smooth ball.

Turn dough on to lightly floured board; knead by lifting, turning and punching down with hand, using some of the extra flour as required. Dough again becomes smooth. Now divide into 2 equal pieces.

To make 2 family-size egg rolls:

Roll out one piece into oval about ¼-inch thick, and 10 by 6 inches, dusting with flour as needed to prevent sticking.

Now take 5 hard boiled eggs (shelled), and set end to end in a row down middle. Fold dough lengthwise over eggs, leaving an inch on opposite side.

Press dough lightly at join, and at ends to contain the eggs. Lift the roll gently and quickly to a greased cookie sheet. If desired, make thin strips of dough into the family name and adhere to the top of roll.

The second roll can be exactly the same as the first, OR it can be spread with the following filling.

Filling for second Easter Roll:

¼ cup currants
¼ cup raisins
¼ cup ground peanuts or filberts or sunflower seeds
1 tsp dark molasses

Mix together. Spread on rolled-out oval. Fold over lengthwise; press lightly at join to seal. Place on greased cookie sheet beside first roll.

To Raise and Bake: Place cookie sheet in cold oven. Set dial to warm 35 deg. C to begin rising. After 10 minutes turn dial off.

When dough reaches about double in size, turn dial to hot 219 deg. C to stop the rising and begin baking. After 10 minutes, turn dial to moderate 177 deg. C to finish baking until pleasantly brown.

Time from turning dial to hot until baking is completed will be about 25 minutes.

You should not leave the oven during these first two rising periods or the dough may spoil by either overrising or scorching.

For Making Individual Easter Egg Rolls:

Take pieces of the prepared dough the size of a tennis ball. Roll and pull into small ovals; place one hard boiled egg, shelled, or half a large egg, in centre of each oval. Fold over lengthwise and seal.

Put small rolls on greased cookie sheet. Take narrow strips of thin dough to fashion into personal names. Attach to top of rolls.

Place cookie sheet in cold oven as described under To Raise and Bake above, and proceed as directed, giving these rolls only 15 to 20 minutes to bake because they are smaller.

Instruction is blind feeding the blind

CALGARY (CP) — A watched pot proverbially never boils. If that were true, Diana Brent's would be bubbling all the time.

Blind from birth, she cooks with her ears rather than her eyes.

"Your ears do a lot," said Brent, 29, a cooking instructor to the visually impaired at the Canadian Institute for the Blind in Calgary.

With braille recipe in hand, she quickly and efficiently moved around the small kitchen gathering the ingredients and equipment to prepare beef Stroganoff with her student, Rod Desgagne.

The first step facing blind students is to overcome their fear of heat from the stove, said Brent.

"When we teach them to feel for something on the stove, it's always low and slow."

The dials on the centre's stove are marked with screws identifying temperatures, and the sharp carving knives are covered with protective shields.

Chopping onions can be hard enough for a sighted person, but Desgagne made it look easy as he sliced them and dropped them into the frying pan on the stove.

"I've got my share of burns too," the instructor admitted, "but at least nobody has spilled hot fat on themselves or anything."

She said most of her students are young adults, some of whom are getting ready to live on their own. To prepare students, she also teaches skills like the care of clothes, vacuuming and cleaning.

Tom's a leftover champ

By MIKE McGRADY

Turkey? What's the occasion? Aha, that's the whole problem with turkey. It's one of those unfortunate dishes — like fruit cakes (Christmas), baked ham (Easter) — that is so solidly linked to a specific holiday that we have trouble imagining it, or cooking it, any other time of the year.

I'm not saying you can't find turkey during the rest of the year. But you have to look for it. And where you generally find it, covered with mayo, is nestled between the bacon and the lettuce in your basic club sandwich.

This is a shame. Tom Turkey has many virtues other than just tasting good. Usually there is enough meat on a single bird to feed both your mob and a full set of visiting in-laws. Then, too, Tom's the leftover champ of the Free World — useful for soups, gravies, salads and hashes.

Turkey for Easter? Maybe the turkey itself should be the occasion.

The Staples: Make sure you have these on hand: garlic, olive oil, wine vinegar, salt, pepper, butter, paprika.

The Shopping List: One turkey (10 pounds will do nicely); four pounds of potatoes; one small package of cream cheese; three onions; one and a half pounds of string beans; one lemon; one orange; four ounces of grated parmesan cheese; one quart of ice cream.

There are several distinct advantages to preparing this un-Thanksgiving turkey. In the first place, you don't have to cook all the side dishes that people consider part of the holiday tradition. Secondly, you don't have to follow the traditional baking methods that too often produce a bird just a bit on the dry side.

3 P.M.: Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Today we're going to be using a Dutch oven; that's the large baking dish with the tight cover that fits into the oven. If you can't locate one of those, it's possible to get by with a deep baking dish and a tight covering of metal foil.

As the oven heats up, you prepare the paste that you're going to smear over the turkey. Mince three cloves of garlic. Add a large pinch of paprika, a generous amount of salt and pepper and enough freshly squeezed lemon juice to form a paste. Paint this over the surface of the bird.

Peel two medium-sized onions and cut them into small chunks. Place these in the turkey cavity. Slice the orange into thin slices and lay these slices over the entire surface of the turkey.

At this point, if your wife happens to wander into the kitchen, she may make an observation: "That's no way to cook a turkey!" Don't listen, It may not be the standard way to cook a turkey, but in some families it has become that.

3:15 P.M.: Put turkey in the Dutch oven and make sure cover is tight. Place the pot in the preheated oven.

4:15 P.M.: Lower oven temperature to 350 degrees. Remove cover (or metal foil) and every 20 minutes or so, baste the bird with its own juices.

5:15 P.M.: Remove the orange slices from the body of the turkey. Add a slight dusting of paprika. Return the bird to the oven for its third and final hour of baking. Continue to baste it periodically with the pan juices.

5:30 P.M.: Cut the tips from the green beans and then slice the beans lengthwise. (Cutting off tips of beans is one the world's dullest tasks and you may want to con one of the kids into doing it.) Peel one small onion and chop it fine. Add a clove of garlic, miced. And the grated parmesan cheese. Four tablespoons of olive oil. Two tablespoons of wine vinegar. A pinch of salt and pepper. Set this aside until beans are cooked.

5:45 P.M.: Start a large pot of water boiling for the potatoes and a small pot of water for the string beans. Then peel the potatoes.

6:10 P.M.: Drop potatoes into boiling water. Boil potatoes until a fork passes through them easily — usually about 20 minutes. Drop the string beans into smaller pot and boil for just a few minutes, until they are tender. Drain the water away from the beans and add the parmesan mixture; keep warm over low heat until ready to serve.

6:15 P.M.: Check turkey for doneness. If drumsticks seem loose in their sockets, bird is cooked through. A second test: jab a sharp knife into the turkey thigh; if the liquid that escapes is yellowish or clear, the bird is well done. If it's still pink, more cooking time is required.

6:30 P.M.: Remove potatoes from boiling water and mash with an electric beater. Cut a stick of butter into small pieces and add these to the hot potatoes along with the small package of cream cheese. Beat until smooth and add salt and pepper to taste.

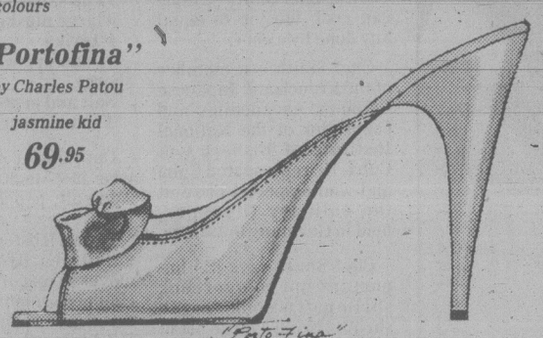

Much has been written about the proper way to carve a turkey. I have read these instructions every year, and I have never yet managed to summon up the requisite surgical dexterity. You will soon discover that any method that separates the meat from the rest of the turkey will be just fine with the family.

Orange Glazed Pork is an easy and tasty recipe for your Easter dinner

Pork a lengthy tradition

Easter is one of the holy festivals celebrated by both Christians and Jews. Many of the rituals used in celebrating Easter originated in ancient times and have been passed down through the generations.

Lamb, originally the symbol of the Feast of Passover, is often served at the Easter dinner. Pork is also featured at many easter meals.

To ancient Europeans, the pig was a symbol of good luck, and pork was served at festive occasions throughout the year.

Usually, baked ham is the star of the meal but our recipe today features Orange Glazed Pork, a succulent pork roast with tangy orange glaze, as main attraction of the Easter dinner.

ORANGE GLAZED PORK

5 lb. pork loin roast
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp pepper
¼ cup frozen orange juice
2 Tbsp. honey
1 Tbsp. prepared mustard
Orange slices and parsley

Score pork roast in a diagonal pattern.

Place prok on a rack in a shallow baking pan. Insert a meat thermometer in thickest part of roast not touching bone or fat.

Roast, uncovered at 325 degrees F. for 45 minutes per pound or until thermometer registers 185 degrees F.

To serve, place roast on a serving platter; garnish with orange slices and parsley. Ten to 12 servings.

Taste for chitlins moves way north

By MARY HASKETT

According to folklore, they are cheap and nutritious. Now a Maryland college professor's research shows the folklorists are right.

"When I was growing up in the South (Rock Hill, S.C.), I was told to eat chitlins because they were nutritious," said Moses W. Vaughn of the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore in Princess Anne, Md.

"I liked some of them, but there was very little information to support what I was told."

Vaughn was given a $114,067 research grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to investigate the nutritional value of chitterlings — popularly called chitlins — and other pork by-products.

So far he has found cooked chitlins compare favorably with commercially available meat patties with textured vegetable protein added, or with a mixture of about 60 per cent lean beef and 40 per cent soy protein concentrate.

They have a protein efficiency ratio — an evaluation of a food's protein content for nutrition — of about 1.9. Most meats range from 2.3 to 2.9, Vaughn said in an interview.

"They're not as good as pork chops or steak in nutritional value, but they're better than I expected," he said.

He also cautioned that chitlins are high in saturated fats and cholesterol.

"I wouldn't mind eating a big bowl of chitlins, but I wouldn't do it every day," said the 66-year-old professor.

Maryland Department of Agriculture statistics show each North American consumed an average of 65 pounds of pork last year, an increase of eight pounds from 1978.

Vaughn said many dietitians and welfare and public health workers making surveys have asked for data on the composition and nutritive values of pork by-products.

He said Southerners may have first recognized chitlins as food, but that they are sold everywhere now.

"There was a time when you could get them for almost nothing, but they're not as cheap anymore."

Vaughn also refuted the common belief that chitlins are eaten mainly by blacks.

"Every year they have a Chitlin Strut in Sally, S.C., where they cook 500 pounds of chitlins and all kinds of people come, not just blacks," Vaughn said.

He estimated up to 10 percent of all North Americans eat pork by-products.

While he found chitlins nutritionally acceptable, pigs' ears are not, he said.

With a protein efficiency ratio of only 0.8 per cent, they they do not make an adequate source of protein when eaten alone, he said.

Vaughn is still trying to determine the nutritional value of pigs' feet, knuckles, tails, neck bones and hog maws.

Food fills Ukrainian fete

By RUTH ILNYTZKY

In the life of Victoria's Ukrainians the entire year constitutes one great cycle of holidays enriched with charming customs — many of which have come down from pre-Christian times.

Early Ukrainian Christians refused to discard some ancient beliefs and fitted them into their new Christianjty — particularly Easter customs.

One of the most beautiful of all Ukrainian Easter traditions is decorating eggs with designs of a symbolic nature. The design is actually written on the egg "pysanky" (meaning to write — pysaty) with a fine-pointed stylus dipped in wax, after which follows a series of dye baths. Pysanky are not eaten.

Originally pysanky symbolized the release of the earth from the shackles of winter and the coming of spring. After the advent of Christianity, the decorated eggs took the new symbols of the Resurrection with its promise of a better world.

In Victoria, members of the Ukrainian Canadian Cultural Society have been preparing for Easter, when traditional practices will be observed by many of the 2,000 area residents of Ukrainian background.

Saturday at 8 a.m. members of St. George's Orthodox Church at 1100 Colville St. will conduct Easter services. Sunday at St. Nicholas Ukrainian Catholic Church on Cook, services will begin at 9:30.

At the conclusion of the service, rows and rows of food-laden baskets will be blessed.

Food baskets covered with richly-embroidered napkins will contain Easter breads "paska" and "babka" with a selection of multicolored pysanky.

People will greet one another with shouts of "Khrystos voskres!" ("Christ is risen!") to which the reply is "Voistyno voskres!" ("He is risen indeed!). It is the custom to exchange or give Easter eggs then.

After church, people will return home to breakfasts of cooked eggs, varied hot and cold meats, salads, horseradish and beet relish and a number of delectable breads and pastries.

EASTER PASKA

1 tsp. sugar
1 cup lukewarm water
1 pckg. dry yeast
3 cups scalded milk
5 cups flour
6 eggs, beaten
1 cup sugar
½ cup melted butter
1 Tbsp. salt
9 to 10 cups sifted flour

Dissolve sugar in lukewarm water, sprinkle in yeast, let sit 10 minutes.

Combine softened yeast with lukewarm milk and five cups of flour. Beat well until smooth. Cover and let batter rise in warm place until light and bubbly.

Add beaten eggs, sugar, melted butter, and salt; mix thoroughly. Stir in enough flour to make a dough that is neither too soft nor too stiff.

Knead until smooth and satiny. Place in a bowl, cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk.

Punch down and let it rise again. This amount will give two large loaves.

Divide dough into three parts. Reserve one part for ornamenting the loaves.

Shape the other two parts into two round loaves. Roll two long rolls and trim the ends. Place the rolls over the top of the loaf, crossing one another evenly.

Tuck the ends of the rolls under the loaf. Shape the trimmed dough into twisted swirls or rosettes. Use sharp scissors to make fine petals on the rosettes.

Set the loaves in a warm place until they are almost double in bulk. Take care not to let loaves rise too long because ornaments such as rosettes may lose their shape.

Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) for about 15 minutes, then lower temperature to 350 degrees and continue baking for 40 minutes longer — or until done.

EASTER BABKA

1 cup milk
⅓ cup flour
2 tsps. sugar
½ cup lukewarm water
3 pkgs. dry yeast
10 to 12 egg yolks
2 whole eggs
1 tsp. salt
1 cup sugar
1 cup melted butter
2 tsps. vanilla
Grated lemon rind
1 cup raisins

Bring milk to boil, remove from range. Add hot milk gradually to flour and beat thoroughly until smooth and free of lumps. If necessary, strain or press mixture through sieve. Cool to lukewarm.

Dissolve sugar in lukewarm water, sprinkle yeast over it and let stand until every yeast granule is softened. Combine with lukewarm milk-flour paste, beat well, cover and let rise in warm place until light and bubbly.

Beat egg yolks and whole eggs together along with salt; add sugar gradually and continue beating until light. Beat in butter, vanilla, lemon rind. Combine this mixture with the sponge and mix well.

Stir in enough flour to make very soft dough and knead it in bowl by working dough over and up continually for about 10 minutes.

Usual method of kneading does not apply to babka dough. This dough is very soft. Thorough kneading is essential to develop its elasticity. Raisins should be added after dough is kneaded. cover and let it rise in a warm place until double in bulk. Punch down, knead a few times, and let rise again. Second rising may be omitted.

Prepare tall, round baking pans by buttering them generously with soft butter and sprinkling them lightly with fine bread crumbs. Babka is always baked in a tall, cylindrical pan (coffee tin) or a large tube pan. Fill pans one-third full. This is very important. Cover and let dough rise in warm place until it reaches brim of pan. It should triple in bulk. Brush loaves with beaten egg dilued with dash of milk or water.

Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for about 10 minutes, then lower to 325 and bake 30 minutes; then again lower temperature, to 275 and continue baking for 15 to 20 minutes. Remove loaves from oven and let stand in pans five to 10 mnutes.

Tip each loaf onto a pillow. This is important as careless handling of babka may cause it to fall. As loaves cool, change their positions gently a few times. If desired, loaves may be decorated and iced using icing sugar and baker' confetti.

Cut in slices across the loaf to make rounds.

FOR VICTORIA'S 2,000-member Ukrainian community Easter is a food-filled celebration of Christ's resurrection and the promise of a better world and the coming of spring. Here, Betty Faryna displays basket of "pysanky" and traditional Ukrainian baked Easter goods — babka at left and paska, right foreground. Instruction in pysanky has been going on in city for past month in preparation for religious holiday — and recipes for the two traditional loaves are printed here today for general enjoyment of Ukrainian and non-Ukrainian alike.

Sautee means little less fat

questions & answers

Q. Sometimes in recipes you instruct the cook to "fry" one ingredient or another. At other times you instruct the cook to saute something. Isn't fry and saute the same thing, so why don't you simply say fry?

A. Such are the nuances of language in the kitchen. While it is true that fry is an all embracing term meaning to cook something in fat, there are sub-categories of the term. There is deep frying, meaning to cook something in a great quantity of fat; shallow frying, which is done in a skillet with fat that does not cover the food to be fried, and then comes sauteeing. In my mind sauteeing more often than not means to cook in as little fat as possible. I believe the term connotes the same idea in the minds of most serious cooks.

Q. I was recently given a jar of black truffles which, as you know, are priced today, if not like gold, at least like sterling. There are three large truffles in the jar, and I would never use all for one dish. Once the jar is opened, will the unused truffles keep under ordinary refrigeration? Or how should I go about keeping them?

A. It is best to transfer an unused truffle or truffles to a small jar with a tight-fitting lid. Cover the truffle with Cognac or a fortified wine such as Madeira or Sherry. Close the jar tightly and refrigerate. I have kept truffles for months by using this technique. And, incidentally, the liquid can also be used later for cooking dishes to which the taste of truffles would be an asset.

Q. I recently found myself out of all-purpose flour. I did have cake flour on the shelf and decided not to try it as a substitute. Was I correct? And what is the difference between cake flour and all-purpose flour?

A. All-purpose flour is destined to be used in soups, sauces, stews and so on. It is made with a blend of hard and soft wheat. Cake flour, on the other hand, is made only from soft wheat, and it gives a grainier crumb to the texture of a cake when it is used. I would never substitute the one for the other, but manufacturers of various flours state that you can substitute regular or all-purpose flour for cake flour as follows: Sift your all-purpose flour. For each cup of cake flour called for in your recipe, measure out a cup of the sifted all-purpose product. Spoon away two tablespoons and use the remainder in your cake.

Q. You recently noted that the soup called Billi Bi is named for an American named William B. Leeds (Billy B.), a tin tycoon. Would you please print a recipe for this soup, which you call the world's greatest?

A. Here is Pierre Franey's version:

BILLI BI

2 pounds mussels.

2 shallots, coarsely chopped.

2 small onions, quartered.

2 sprigs parsely.

Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste.

Pinch of cayenne pepper.

1 cup dry white wine.

2 tablespoons butter.

2 cups heavy cream.

1 egg yolk, lightly beaten.

1. Scrub the mussels well to remove all exterior sand and d in a large kettle with the shallots, onions, parsley, salt, black pepper, cayenne, wine, butter, bay leaf and thyme. Cover and bring to the boil. Simmer five to 10 minutes or until the mussels have opened. Discard any mussels that do not open.

2. Strain the liquid through a double thickness of cheesecloth. Reserve the mussels for another use or remove them from the shells and use them as a garnish for the soup.

3. Bring the liquid in the saucepan to a boil and add the cream. Return to the boil and remove from the heat. Add the beaten egg yolk and return to the heat long enough for the soup to thicken slightly. Do not boil. Serve hot or cold.

Yield: 4 servings.

Note: This soup may be enriched, if desired, by stirring in two tablespoons of hollandaise sauce before it is served.

Readers are invited to send in questions about food and cooking techniques to the Food Editor, The New York Times, 229 West 43d Street, New York, N.Y. 10036. Unfortunately, unpublished questions cannot be answered individually.

Unable to go a'wooing, frog croaks meowing

Gordon Grovestine, a lab technician at the University of Prince Edward Island, said cause of death is unknown and the body is being kept frozen for the time being.

However a student said "maybe he croaked of a broken heart" because the frog was kept in captivity without a mate.

The two-pound southern bullfrog gained renown across North America because of its ability to make a "meowing" rather than "croaking" sound.

Hop Sing became an international celebrity with the university receiving calls from radio stations and newspapers throughout North America about him.

He was dubbed Hop Sing by students who hoped the name would not offend people of oriental extraction.

Ottawa launches 'no' ad campaign

MONTREAL (CP) — Ottawa may spend $400,000 or more to advertise the advantages of federalism to Quebec in the period leading up to the spring referendum.

The government has launched a $150,000, two-week newspaper campaign urging Quebecers to write in for booklets on federalism and may extend it to the end of April — for another $150,000 — if the response is good.

A spokesman for the Canadian Unity Information Office in Ottawa said Tuesday the government will also buy radio spots on the same subjects and there is a possibility of still more advertising.

The unity office is also continuing to send pro-federalist exhibits, centring on government services and Canada's energy wealth, to Quebec communities at a cost of $9,200 a week.

The spokesman said the exhibits will go on "for many, many months to come" while the advertising campaign "probably won't go beyond April."

But even so, one or both might run into trouble with Quebec's referendum law.

The law requires virtually all referendum spending to be channelled through umbrella committees running the yes and the no campaigns and limits expenses to $2.1 million for each side. The restrictions apply once Premier Rene Levesque announces the referendum date.

The unity office spokesman said any conflict "would be something that would have to be dealt with if it ever arises." She said the government's opinion is that federalist booklets that have already been published do not need to be counted as an official expense of the no campaign.

She isn't aware, however, of any legal opinion on whether the ads themselves might violate the law if they are not registered as official expenses.

The advertising covers four subjects: the billions of dollars in equalization payments from Ottawa to the provinces; how federalism helps the important Quebec textile industry; trade; and federalism generally.

The latter theme appeared Sunday. Entitled "we are two billion," it lists other federal states in the world and says how popular it is as a form of government. It notes the United States, the Soviet Union, Austria, Australia and Brazil are among those countries with a federal system.

Meanwhile the Quebec Assembly adjourned Tuesday night for a week-long Easter holiday but when it reconvenes April 9, Quebecers will learn the exact date of the referendum.

Although it reconvenes April 9, the referendum date will probably be determined the next day at a cabinet meeting.

Spokesmen for Premier Rene Levesque's office said he will be "taking in the sun" during the Easter holidays. They would not specify where Levesque will be. Opposition leader Claude Ryan will take about three days off and continue his campaigning for the "no" vote.

According to Bill 92, the law laying the groundrules for the referendum, campaigning can last from 35 and 60 days.

Pepin pressed for Rupert port

EDMONTON (CP) — Western grain companies will press the new Liberal government to fulfil what they say is a federal commitment to help finance the proposed grain terminal at Prince Rupert.

Allan Macpherson, president of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said Tuesday he and other representatives of the Prince Rupert grain and coal consortium, will meet Thursday in Regina with Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin to try to convince him to fulfil a commitment made by his Progressive Conservative predecessor, Don Mazankowski.

The commitment calls on Ottawa to pay up to $42.5 million toward site development costs at the Prince Rupert terminal without charging the consortium for most of the work.

But Pepin has said he wants to renegotiate the financial arrangements of the deal so the federal government can, in effect, charge for some of the work.

New RCMP power urged

TORONTO (UPC) — Federal Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan said Tuesday he is rushing to cabinet with new regulations that would authorize the RCMP to open mail in the pursuit of drug traffickers.

He would also authorize other RCMP activities now in use but on questionable authority, he told the Toronto Junior Board of Trade in a Tuesday night speech.

"I'm rushing to cabinet and have half drawn up a set of provisions pursuant to which ... the solicitor general will be empowered to licence police officers, again to validate their activities in pursuing drug traffickers and pushers and so on," Kaplan said.

He said the provisions, to be placed under the Food and Drug Act and the Narcotics Control Act, would be finalised in the next few days.

Kaplan said he had been "very impressed" during his few weeks as solicitor general in Pierre Trudeau's Liberal cabinet with RCMP arguments that they need greater powers for the pursuit of drug traffickers.

"And certainly in the field of letter opening, I think that there are justifications for opening mail and that there ought to be a law that would permit it," he said.

Kaplan also said he hopes the final report of the McDonald Commission into RCMP irregularities will provide him with workable guidelines for RCMP powers.

"At least one of my predecessors has told the commission that my job is impossible in its present terms because inadequate machinery exists for effective oversight.

"I am not prepared to agree with this but certainly I must quickly come to terms with it," Kaplan said.

StatsCan not wasteful or corrupt

OTTAWA (CP) — An inquiry into Statistics Canada by lawyer Peter Newcombe does not support allegations that employees of the federal agency were wasteful and corrupt, Treasury Board President Donald Johnston said Tuesday.

Johnston revealed the conclusion of the inquiry in a news release, but said he does not intend to table the report in Parliament because of the personal references it contains.

However, Johnston said three separate investigations into Statistics Canada have "cleared the air and provided a solid base on which to make the necessary improvements in Statistics Canada."

Newcombe was appointed last fall to investigate allegations that millions of dollars had been wasted on useless projects and that some figures on the country's gross national product had been deliberately altered.

The charges were made by Boris Celovsky, an agency employee, in a letter to chief statistican Peter Kirkham dated Nov. 6. When subpoenaed by Newcombe in February, Celovsky declined to repeat or substantiate the allegations.

Sinclair Stevens, Johnston's predecessor under the former Progressive Conservative government, initiated the inquiry after Celovsky's letter was leaked to the press Nov. 8.

He also commissioned Price Waterhouse to investigate management practices and an international group of experts, headed by Sir Claus Moser, to study agency methodology.

Those reports concluded that statistics Canada's methodology is of high quality although there were some management and communications problems.

Johnston has said he will table the Waterhouse and Moser studies in Parliament at the first opportunity.

And, although he would not table the Newcombe report, he said he was willing to make it available in confidence to spokesmen of the opposition parties in Parliament.

Celovsky said he hopes Johnston changes his mind and makes public the report and minutes of the hearings.

"It's public business...," he said in a telephone interview. "It's not a matter of national security. What's public business should be made public."

Safety expert lied about files

TORONTO (CP) — An aviation safety expert ordered the removal of documents from a file after telling a department of justice lawyer they did not exist, a federal inquiry into aviation safety was told Tuesday.

Harold Fawcett, chief of the transport ministry's safety investigation branch, said his statement to lawyer John Sims during a meeting in Ottawa on June 29, 1978, was not true.

He said he decided that documents concerning the crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet near Cranbrook were confidential and should not be revealed.

"I told Mr. Sims the material he thought we should turn over didn't exist," he said.

The federal government is fighting a $15-million lawsuit arising from the 1978 crash in which 43 people died.

Fawcett said he told Dr. Francois Dube, an aviation medical expert, to get rid of material in the accident files following the meeting with Sims.

However, he said he did not specify the Cranbrook file and did not believe he was ordering Dube to dispose of those documents.

Dube testified earlier he interpreted the order to mean he should destroy any material not relating to aviation safety in the Cranbrook file.

He said he disposed of working notes and copies of autopsy reports as well as draft reports.

Fawcett said he did not at any time instruct anyone to destroy material that would "obscure any insight" into the cause of the crash.

He said that in future investigators will have to confine their accident reports to facts and leave aside the more subjective and speculative findings concerning human factors.

Jehovahs charged in death

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (UPC) — A Jehovah's Witnesses minister and the parents of a 12-year-old girl who died after being spirited out of a hospital when doctors prescribed a blood transfusion have been charged with criminal negligance, authorities said Tuesday.

The trio was charged late Monday after Sara Cyrenne died of an undisclosed illness following her removal from a Thunder Bay hospital Saturday.

The girl was brought to McKellar Hosital by ambulance from her home in Manitouwadge, about 150 miles northeast of Thunder Bay, but vanished after doctors told her parents the child needed a transfusion forbidden by the Witnesses sect.

Police later found the car allegedly used to carry the girl away but could not locate her until Sunday morning when a funeral home was called to pick up her body.

Tax returns slow but sure

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadians are taking more time to file their income tax forms this year, but Revenue Canada officials are assessing the returns quicker, government statistics released Tuesday indicated.

Faye Brothers, a spokesman for Revenue Canada, said about 4.3 million tax forms were received by March 13, compared with 4.8 million that date a year earlier.

She said 798,047 forms had been assessed by March 13 this year, compared with 469,538 in 1979.

Three-province hydro grid eyed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have agreed to a "final, all-encompassing study" that could lead to development of a Western hydroelectric power grid, Premier Sterling Lyon has announced.

Lyon told the legislature no pact to establish a network linking the three hydro systems will be considered until the end of the study, expected no later than Sept. 30.

"All three governments are optimistic about the outcome," Lyon said. Manitoba Finance Minister Donald Craik was in Edmonton for a formal signing of the agreement.

Lyon's statement was laced with comments about the "prudent" development of Manitoba's hydroelectric potential which he said would come from any decision to set up the power grid.

Hydroelectric development in Manitoba continues to be a hot political issue and Lyon's statement brought a sharp retort from opposition New Democratic Party leader Howard Pawley.

Pawley noted Lyon mentioned the contribution of former Progressive Conservative premier Duff Roblin in developing Manitoba's hydroelectric resources.

But he said Lyon ignored the work of Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer who was the NDP premier of Manitoba for eight years.

Pawley said the power grid project would not have been possible if Manitoba had followed the views outlined in the controversial Tritschler report on hydro development.

The report criticized the former NDP government and hydro officals for overbuilding. However, Pawley said the opposition joined with the government in wishing for a favorable report.

The study assumes that Alberta will buy 1,000 megawatts of Manitoba Hydro electricity, starting in 1987. Saskatchewan has also expressed an interest in buying power on a firm, not an interruptible, basis.

Meanwhile in Edmonton, Premier Peter Lougheed told the Alberta legislature that preliminary examination of the proposal indicates the benefits from the interconnection would accrue to all three Prairie provinces.

Lougheed said detailed studies will determine the engineering, configuration and utility aspects of the transmission, production and delivery of electrical energy as well as benefits to the three provinces.

Craik signed the agreement with John Messer, Saskatchewan's mineral resources' minister and Larry Shaben, Alberta's minister of utilities and telephones.

Lougheed also told the house the Alberta government has decided to develop the hydroelectric potential of the Dunvegan Dam near Peace River, in northern Alberta.

Birthplace rescued

LACOMBE, Alta. (CP) — Mitchener House has been rescued from tax sale by the Maski-Pitoon Historical Society.

Declared a historic site by the provincial government in 1967, the birthplace of former Lt.-Gov. Roland Michener was scheduled to be sold for back taxes, but the historical society paid the $2,096 tax bill.

Big-time tippling in Red Deer

EDMONTON (CP) — More money was parted from the thirsty in the Red Deer liquor store during the 1978-79 fiscal year than in any other liquor store in the province, the Alberta Liquor Control Board's 59th annual report shows.

The board's report for the year ended March 31, 1979, showed sales of $7,663,477 in liquor and $1,468,101 in beer, for a total of $9,131,578.

The total outstripped the busiest big-city liquor store, Edmonton West, which recorded $8,890,272 in total beer and liquor sales. Only a handful of mail-order outlets and brewers' warehouses sold more.

Total store sales in other medium-sized centres around the province included: $5,311,450 at Grande Prairie, $6,612,948 at Fort McMurray and $2,570,084 at Lloydminster.

A beer strike during the 1978-79 year sent sales of Canadian beer, ale and stout down 5.8 per cent from the previous year to 31.3 million gallons, but higher prices sent the dollar total of beer sales up 1.2 per cent to $136.5 million.

No joke, just costly

SASKATOON (CP) — It was no April Fool's joke for Saskatchewan residents Tuesday. Beer prices went up 45 cents a dozen to $5.70 for regular and $5.10 for low calorie. Motor vehicle registration fees also rose $6 for private vehicles and $17 for commercial. Driver licence registration went from $3 to $5.

Racism alleged in Calgary publication

CALGARY (CP) — A committee of the Canadian University Press, a national organization of student newspapers, says the Reflector, the student publication of Calgary's Mount Royal College, has carried some racist and sexist items.

Doris Schupp, a committee member, said the national organization received complaints from some Mount Royal students. She said the committee found a Reflector cartoon on the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, in which a Russian bear is to rape a woman symbolizing Afghanistan, both sexist and racist. An article in which students were invited to "fly Irano to holiday in Iran and Afghanistan" was found to be racist.

10,000 houses

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government is earmarking $500 million dollars to finance up to 10,000 new housing units, Housing Minister Tom Chambers said. Chambers said the money will come from the $5.8-billion Heritage Savings Trust Fund and will be allocated to the Alberta Home Mortgage Corp. for use in two programs.

Ranch fame hall

CALGARY (CP) — A group representing Alberta ranchers wants to establish a hall of fame and information centre in Calgary.

Lois Holloway, spokesman for the Stockmen's Memorial Association, said the group hopes to have the centre established in three years.

Seeks PC post

CALGARY (CP) — Bill Skoreyko, former MP for Edmonton East, has announced his candidacy for the presidency of the provincial Progressive Conservative party.

Skoreyko, MP from 1958 to 1979, is so far the only declared candidate. The new president will be chosen at the party's annual convention in Edmonton soon.

Calagry lawyer Fred Stewart, party president for the last two years, will not seek another term.

Farmers fight

BRANDON (CP) — The newly-formed Miniota subdivision retention committee is fighting CP Rail's plan to abandon the Forrest-to-Crandall branchline in western Manitoba.

A letter has been sent to the western division of the Canadian Transport Commission in Saskatoon asking it to hold a public hearing into the planned July 31 abandonment, committee chairman Frank McPhaden said Thursday.

"We'll be faced with a much longer haul for our grain (if the 100-kilometre railline is abandoned)," the Oak River area farmer said.

He said the planned abandonment would eliminate grain elevators at Crandall, Hamiota, Oak River, Rapid City and Forrest.

"The railway and the elevator are the tools of our trade," he said.

"They are part of our business of farming."

Bravery award

CROWSNEST PASS, Alta.(CP) — Lynn Joseph Montney, 18, of Crowsnest Pass has won a bravery award for his part in saving the life of an Edmonton youth in August 1978.

Alberta Lt.-Gov. Frank Lynch-Staunton presented the award to Montney who pulled the youth to shore when he ran into difficulty swimming from a raft to the shoreline of Allison Lake near Coleman in southwestern Alberta.

Cable firms abandon CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC was dealt a humiliating blow Tuesday when a majority of cable television systems said they will dump the corporation's coverage of House of Commons debates and substitute their own.

Starting April 14 when Parliament resumes, roughly 1.7 million households will see the Commons at work through the courtesy of the Cable Satellite Network.

In contrast, less than one million households will be able to watch the CBC service. And that figure could be further reduced if a Montreal-based cable system joins the cable Satellite Network as expected.

Until now CBC has enjoyed a monopoly on televising parliamentary debates. Its employees produced the program and made it available free of charge by satellite to any cable system wanting it.

Al Johnson, CBC president, has estimated the cost to the CBC at just less than $2 million.

Cable companies estimate their new service will cost them $650,000.

Without the co-operation of the cable companies, CBC has no way to deliver its parliamentary service to television sets.

Duplication of services by the CBC and the cable companies was made possible Tuesday when the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission issued temporary licences to both groups. It has done so since 1978, but each time there was an agreement by the corporation and the cable companies to work together.

The duplication of the parliamentary signals also could be seen as a continuation of the battle over who gets control over pay television.

Both CBC and the cable companies are seeking licences from the commission for this country's first pay television channel.

The CBC argues that the cable companies should not be in the broadcasting business but should confine their role to that of common carrier.

The corporation wants broadcasters to control pay television and plough all of its profits back into producing Canadian programs good enough to break the high percentage of Canadians watching American programs.

The cable companies argue they are part of the Canadian broadcasting system and plan, in addition to showing debates of the Commons, such services as special children's programs, a multilingual service and delivery of a special package for remote areas of the country now with little or no Canadian television services.

CBC officials had no immediate comment on the move of the cable companies, which could take its parliamentary service almost entirely out of Toronto, Vancouver and other cities.

Support for PM sought in July

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal party will hold a national convention in Winnipeg July 4-6 and be asked to endorse the leadership of Pierre Trudeau or to call a convention to replace him.

The party constitution requires that such a question be put to the first national convention following a federal election, Gordon Ashworth, the Liberals' national director, said in an interview today.

The 60-year-old prime minister has said he wants to retire before his five-year mandate expires in 1985; he has not indicated how soon before that date he wants to step down.

About 3,400 persons are expected to attend the convention that will likely be called on to elect a new national president to replace Senator Alasdair Graham.

The Nova Scotia senator has privately said for several months that he wants to step down.

Murray, McLauchlan high in Juno prize nominations

By BRIGID PHILLIPS

TORONTO (UPC) — Grammy-award winner Anne Murray and Toronto country-folk artist Murray McLauchlan highlighted nominations for the 17th annual Juno awards today for achievement in music recording.

Murray, who last year won the prestigious Grammy as best female singer, was favored to sweep four Junos — best female vocalist and best country female singer. New Kind of Feeling was nominated for best album and I Just Fall in Love Again for best single.

The singer from small-town Nova Scotia, who first gained international recognition with her recording Snowbird, was not expected to attend the event, scheduled to be shown at 10 p.m. tonight on CBC television. She flew home to Springhill, N.S. for the funeral of her father, Dr. James Carson Murray, who died Sunday.

Her rivals for the best female vocalist award were Carroll Baker — also nominated as best female country singer — Claudja Barry, Lisa Dal Bello and Joni Mitchell.

McLauchlan, a former "streetsinger" who now records his own brand of country, rock and folk, was nominated as best male vocalist, best country male vocalist and best folk artist.

Best male vocalist nominations also included Burton Cummings, Bruce Cockburn, Gino Vannelli and Neil Young.

Cummings, the flamboyant rock singer who was recently arrested for possession of marijuana, was chosen host of the two-hour extravaganza of the Canadian recording industry.

The black-tie event featured country singer Carroll Baker, rock music by Max Webster and France Joli, a nominee for most promising female vocalist.

Canadian musical artists awards became a gala event in 1970, when the name changed to Juno Awards in honor of Pierre Juneau, former chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission who introduced regulations to increase Canadian content in broadcasting.

Winners in most of the 23 categories were chosen by a vote of the membership of the Canadian Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences (CARAS) and the Canadian Recording Industry Association. Awards for best domestic and international album and single were based on record sales.

The list of nominations in the best album and best single categories were dominated by rock and disco groups, such as Rush, Trooper, Prism, Streetheart, and Claudja Barry, who sings Boogie Woogie Dancin' Shoes.

Records sell too low?

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian record manufacturers and retailers are short-changing themselves by selling records too cheaply, says the chairman of CBS Records Canada Ltd.

Arnold Gosewich told 200 record industry members at a conference retailers are devaluing their products when they put hit albums on sale, in addition to losing up to $4 in potential profit an album.

"What we sell is a bargain," he said, adding that concert prices have risen by 50 per cent and hard-cover book prices by 200 per cent in the last five years while record prices have increased only 33 per cent.

Meet Lisa: The world's top female body builder

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Will there come a time when poets look at a woman and rhapsodize over her trapezious, deltoids, biceps and pectorals instead of the traditional feminine physical charms?

Could be, if Lisa Lyon has her way. Lisa is the world's first woman's body building champion. Her well-developed trapezious, deltoids and other muscles brought her the championship.

Lisa, 26, is a pretty brunette with long, curly hair. She stands 5-4 and weighs a compact 108 pounds — all muscle.

When not accentuating her muscles, Lisa gives the appearance of being as soft, feminine and cuddly as, say, Bo Derek.

Lisa's mission in life is to establish women's body building as a national sport and fitness program without having it become a freak show take-off on the over-developed, muscle-bound male species.

A dancer since childhood and a martial arts student, Lisa had worked out in gyms alongside men for three years when, as a lark, she entered the first World's Women's Body Building Championships in Los Angeles last year.

"I didn't take the competition seriously," said Lisa, a Los Angeles native and UCLA graduate. "We were judged on muscle definition, symmetry, presentation and, I imagine, our facial configuration to some degree.

"I won the contest over nine or 10 other entrants and was amazed at all the attention the championship attracted."

According to Lisa, the Amateur Athletic Union took note of the contest and the National Physique Association, a branch of the AAU, voted to establish a women's committee, electing Lisa to head it up.

"I'm not sure if I'm chairman, chairperson or chairwoman," Lisa said. "I'm not into that sort of feminist thing at all.

"My job is to put together an organization that will provide guidelines for women's body building judging and competition on a national basis. We're in our infancy now but I expect the movement will catch on."

By way of popularizing women's body building, Lisa is producing the first two United States Women's Body Building Championships in Atlantic City April 8.

One competition involves women only, the other is a couples championship, the latter to minimize the freak show onus while simultaneously demonstrating the differences between male and female body building.

Lisa says the championships will be telecast by NBC as half-hour sports shows later this year.

"I've already had more than 50 applications from women all over the country," she said.

"I'm not looking for women who look as if they should compete with men. The ultimate in women's body building is a feline, esthetic look. I think I'm a good role model for other women interested in weightlifting programs.

"I look at my body in terms of a beautiful, functional female animal, a vital, high-technical body which incorporates good health."

Lisa is convinced standards of feminine beauty correspond to the role women play in society at any particular time..

"We are far advanced from the sex goddess look of the 1950s," she said.

When ballyhoo turns into a roadblock

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — They used to call it ballyhoo. Now movies are merchandized with modern techniques, including market surveys, media blitzes and roadblocks.

What's a roadblock? It's the placing of a commercial on all major television networks at the same time so no one watching TV will miss the message.

The super-sell is expensive. Films like All That Jazz and Star Trek-The Motion Picture can run up launching charges of $7 million. The average for a major release is $4 million.

Coal Miner's Daughter offers an interesting case study. Universal Pictures spent $7 million to film the biography of country music singer Loretta Lynn, with Sissy Spacek and Tommy Lee Jones as stars. The movie seemed to have three strikes against it — the title wouldn't turn on most of the country, many citizens lack a taste for country music and the stars weren't box-office names.

"But when we saw a rough cut of the movie, we all thought it had a potential of being a cross-over film," said Gordon Armstrong, Universal's vice-president for advertising, publicity and promotion. A cross-over is a film which seems to be of special interest but is able to cross audience boundaries of age, geography or social status.

"We decided to test the movie in the toughest of cities as well as the easiest; Boston, which has little background for country music, and Memphis, which obviously does."

Analysis of the two previews indicated one weakness: The ending. It seemed ambiguous and slightly downbeat. The film was re-edited to conclude on a happier tone.

Under Armstrong's direction, the selling campaign began early this year. Magazine reviewers, who have long deadlines, were shown early versions of Coal Miner's Daughter. Reaction was favorable.

The campaign began to peak in early March with premieres in Nashville and Louisville. Spacek or Lynn or both appeared on all the major talk shows and gave newspaper and magazine interviews. The March 7 national release was preceded by larger-than-usual newspaper ads, plus an estimated $1.4 million in TV network commercials.

"We wanted to have an audience waiting for the picture on opening day," Armstrong said. "We also wanted to get the jump on other big pictures that are coming out this month. The sales department came through, releasing it two weeks before the others, during a slack period."

'Clergyman malpractice

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — The parents of a 24-year-old church member who committed suicide have sued its vicar for "clergyman malpractice," court records revealed Tuesday.

The suit, brought by Walter and Maria Nally in the Burbank Superior Court, alleged the Rev. John MacArthur and other members of the Grace Community Church of the Valley in Sun Valley failed to provide their son, Kenneth Nally, with proper guidance.

Nally shot himself on April 2 last year.

The lawyer for the parents, Edward Barker, said less than a month before his death, Kenneth Nally had been found to be suffering from "depressive neurosis."

MacArthur advised Nally to consult lay counsellors on the staff of the church . . . to engage in prayer, read scriptures and listen to tape recordings of sermons by . . . MacArthur, the suit alleged.

The suit alleged the counsellors failed to make themselves available to

Homesteaders get home back

QUINCY, Fla. (AP) — Fedo and Hattie Mae Kenon, who lost their modest home because of a $3.05 tax delinquency, have regained ownership after a judge said the tax sale price was "so grossly inadequate as to shock the conscience."

The 65-year-old man, who can neither read nor write, and his wife were told Tuesday in a ruling by Circuit Judge Ben Willis that they can have back the $7,500 home they built 19 years ago.

The couple lost the house in a county auction last July. The man who bought it paid $102 plus interest and back taxes.

"It was good news, the best news I've had in eight or nine months," said Mrs. Kenon. "I've done suffered for this for a long time."

The couple now can think about sprucing up the five-room wood-shingled dwelling or installing central heating to replace the single space heater they use for warmth during brisk North Florida winters.

They must pay a Callahan investor the $102 plus interest he paid for the house and the $2.92 in 1979 taxes he paid.

Willis said he was shocked by the "grossly inadequate" price paid by investor John Barrow, who petitioned the Gadsden County clerk to put the couple's property up for sale because they did not pay $3.05 in 1975 taxes.

Barrow had offered to sell back the property for $10,000.

Contributions, which now total more than $12,000, began pouring in from around the United States last summer after the tax sale. A team of Legal Services lawyers filed suit against Barrow and the Kenons said they will use the contributions to fix up their house if the judge invalidated the tax sale.

The lawyers told Willis he should overturn the sale because the Kenons never knew they owed any back taxes.

Fossil pushes history back

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Scientists have discovered within an Australian rock the fossil remains of the oldest known life on earth, bacteria-like cells that lived and died 3.5 billion years ago, researchers announced Tuesday.

The "very exciting" discovery pushes the history of life back 400 million years, probably as long ago as scientific techniques can reach, said Malcolm Walter of the Australian Burteau of Mineral Resources in Canberra.

Scientists suspected in the past that as long as 3.5 billion years ago there was life on Earth — simple organisms which evolved over the centuries into plant and animal life forms, including man.

"But we could not be sure," Walter said. The discovery of fossils in the Australian rock means that "now we are much more confident of the time," he said.

"It's a very exciting discovery, to look at the oldest evidence for life on earth, to think about the implications of that, of what the early environment of earth was like, when the origins of life occurred and what processes were going on."

The fossils are not those of the bacterial filaments themselves, he said. "There are no preserved cells in the structure," he said, but fossilized marks left by the layers, or mats, of bacteria.

"We can infer from the form of the laminations what the original organisms were like, what their shapes were.

"This significance of this is that now we can confidently interpret evidence of early life at 3.5 billion years."

If there were even older life forms, they may never be discovered because the fossils would not have survived changes in such old rocks, subject to repeated heating, cooling and movement.

The fossils were found by an Australian graduate student in a rock discovered last May in the northwestern Australian desert near a town called North Pole.

Defects back

WASHINGTON (WP) — A Soviet ballet dancer who defected to the United States January and appeared to be enjoying a new life here suddenly and mysteriously altered his plans and left for Moscow last night in the company of Soviet officials.

The dancer is Yuri Stepanov, 32, a soloist with the Moscow Classical Ballet who left the troupe during a tour in Rome late in January and went to the United States embassy there seeking asylum.

Friends of Stepanov believe he was pressured by the Soviets into leaving.

After meeting with Stepanov in the presence of two members of the Soviet consular corps, however, U.S. government officials said they felt the dancer "did want to go back."

Auctioned Monty letters cost thief

LONDON (UPI) — A man has been fined in court for selling a batch of Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery's post-Second World War personal papers for two bottles of cider, a pouch of tobacco and $10.

William Robinson said he picked up the sack of letters from behind a house and sold them to a friend, who sold them to a friend of his for $6,500.

The real, legal owner of the papers, Godfrey Keating, was a former British officer who served under Montgomery.

Keating said he had put the papers in a sack outside his back door while cleaning house. When he heard of the Sotheby's sale, he managed to track down both Robinson and the man who sold the papers to the auction house.

Confesses to 55 deaths of young girls

QUITO (UPI) — A 31-year-old Colombian drifter Alonso Lopez, has confessed he sexually attacked and then killed at least 55 girls between the ages of 9 and 14 during the past seven years, Ecuadorian police said Tuesday.

If convicted, Lopez would rank as one of the biggest mass murderers in Latin American history, but under Ecuadorean law he is expected to be prosecuted only for the first crime discovered.

Lopez, who arrived in Ecuador from neighboring Colombia seven years ago, told police he had committed similar crimes in his native country and in Peru.

African nations huddle

LUSAKA, Zambia (WP) — Nine southern African nations agreed Tuesday to work toward closer integration of their economies in a major move to reduce their dependence on white-ruled South Africa.

At the conclusion of a one-day summit meeting, the nine under-developed nations, stretching from the Atlantic to the Indian Oceans and more than 1,500 miles northward from South Africa, approved a seven-point plan "to coordinate their economies to accelerate their development."

Although seeking to distance themselves from South Africa, the nine nations openly admitted for the first time that they are heavily dependent on Pretoria. They went out of their way to reassure their white-minority-ruled southern neighbor that no hostility was intended in the economic field.

"We want to clarify we are not declaring a war against South Africa," said Mozambique President Samora Machel, whose economy is closely linked to Pretoria.

The effect of the long-term plan is to acknowledge that black Africa must must co-exist economically with South Africa at least for the time being as the struggle for majority rule enters the final phase now that white control has ended in Rhodesia.

OAS observer in Bogota?

BOGOTA (UPI) — Colombian authorities, adopting a new tack to try to solve the Dominican embassy hostage crisis, invited an Organization of American States commission to investigate guerrilla complaints of human rights violations.

The government also announced Tuesday that the ninth round of talks between its negotiators and the April 19 Movement guerrillas, known as M-19, would be held today, the first time discussions have been planned for succeeding days.

The same hooded woman guerrilla who has participated in all the previous negotiating sessions strode Tuesday to the cream-colored van parked outside the Dominican embassy, seized by the M-19 leftist guerrillas 36 days ago.

The guerrilla group holding 27 hostages, including U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio and 18 other diplomats, have demanded an exchange of their captives for 311 political prisoners and $50 million ransom.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Uribe issued his invitation to the OAS' Human Rights Commission to come to Colombia to investigate the guerrillas' charges.

The M-19 accused the government of conducting widespread torture of people arrested for political crimes, one of the main reasons the occupiers of the embassy say they want to get the 311 prisoners out of jail.

In a communique apparently smuggled out of the besieged embassy and delivered Tuesday to news agencies, the M-19 said: "We will leave with our compatriots or die with the dignity of the revolutionary fighting."

The communique appeared to be written on stationery taken from the office of Dominican Ambassador Diogenes Maillol, and had his name printed on the upper left hand corner, with an M-19 logo superimposed on it.

A government source confirmed that the message had come from the embassy, but there was no explanation of how it got through the heavy military force surrounding the occupied building.

Rail fares up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak riders will have to pay at least seven per cent more to ride the passenger trains' rails as of April 27, the federally subsidized rail system said Tuesday. Amtrak announced a seven-per-cent fare increase on all its trains on that date and said some rates will go up 10 per cent.

Empty tanker, freighter bang in fog

GALVESTON (UPI) — An empty 780-foot oil tanker and a cargo ship collided and caught fire in predawn fog today near the busy entrance to Galveston Bay, but the Coast Guard said quick action by the crews saved all but one man from injury.

Coast Guard spokesman Kenneth Harry said the outbound tanker Amoco Cremona and the inbound 540-foot bulk carrier Mason Lykes collided about 4:35 a.m. CST 6 miles southeast of Galveston, 1½ miles off the entrance channel sea buoy. Harry said visibility was "about a half-mile" at the time.

He said the 35-member crew of the tanker was able to lower lifeboats and abandon ship "in orderly fashion" because the tanker, which had unloaded crude oil at Amoco's Texas City facility, was empty.

The crew of the freighter remained on board and extinguished the ship's fire but had to keep moving to avoid drifting because anchors on both sides of the ship were damaged, Harry said. Four Coast Guard vessels were on the scene.

"It appears all people are accounted for," Harry said. "We do have one injury. A man collapsed on our 41-foot boat. He apparently inhaled some sort of fumes."

TERMS OF PUBLICATION

F.P. Newspapers Limited shall not be liable for non-insertion of any advertisement beyond the amount paid for such advertisement.

In the event of error occuring the liability of F.P. Newspapers Limited shall not exceed the charge for the space actually occupied by the item in question.

All claims of error in publication shall be made within 12 hours thereafter and if not made shall not be considered. No claim will be allowed for more than one incorrect insertion nor for errors not affecting the value of advertisement.

All estimates of cost are approximate. Advertisers will be charged with space actually used.

All advertising copy will be subject to the approval of the Victoria Press, who reserve the right in its sole discretion to classify, reject or insert copy furnished.

All advertisements must comply with the British Columbia Human Rights Act. This act states no advertisement may state or imply a preference, limitation or specification on the basis of an applicant's race, religion, colour, marital status, ancestry, place of origin, age; or sex (unless the matter relates to the maintenance of public decency AND prior approval has been obtained through the Human Rights Branch).

While every endeavor will be made to forward replies to box numbers to the advertiser as soon as possible, we accept no liability in respect of loss or damage alleged to arise through either failure or delay in forwarding such replies, however caused, whether by negligence or otherwise.

NOTICE OF COPYRIGHT

Full complete and sole copyright in any advertisement produced by F.P. Newspapers Limited is vested in and belongs to F.P. Newspapers Limited, provided, however, that copyright IN THAT PART AND THAT PART ONLY of any such advertisement consisting of illustrations, borders, signatures or similar components which is, or are, supplied to Victoria Press by the advertiser in the form of reproduction proofs, veloxs, etc., and incorporated in said advertisement shall remain in and belong to the advertiser.

39 PERSONALS

LADIES WOULD YOU LIKE TO travel by lands or sea? For as long and as far as you want. If you are single, divorced, separated or single parent, no triangles please, age is not afactor. If you are in a rut read on. I am forty and debt free, have no ties, 6' tall, 200 pounds, can afford to do what little boys dream about and old men can't. Have a very large and plush car, travel in an extra large executive type holiday trailer, loaded with extras, microwave, TV, stereo, air conditioning, built—in power plant, can stop anyplace you please. Also have a very large live—aboard twin motored power boat, both trailer and boat have separate bedrooms for the ladies own convenience. This is your choice. Have not yet bought an airplane, sorry about this, but can fly. I like sports and outdoor life and have lots of hobbies. If you'd like to get away for a few days in the middle of the week or weekend, for a month or longer, I'm easy, the time is your own. The trailer or the boat are not sinbin's, I like to travel in comfort, but not alone. I've just arrived on the Island, and it's a lot nicer to travel with a companion, if you have funds, fine, if not, be my guest. There are no obligation whatsoever attached to this. Just honest, compatible relationship, and some trust. All it takes is a 17¢ stamp, a few minutes of your time and mine. I would like a photo, but not necessary. I hate writing, a phone is easier. Hold this ad for future reference. Victoria Press Box 243.

Glenlyon pupil takes top honors

Charlesworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Charlesworth of 93 Beach, gained a top grade of 91 per cent on his essay Advantages of Being a Member of the Commonwealth. The prize includes $200 cash.

Three other Glenlyon students, Philip Spencer, Paul Buck and Andrew Molloy, with respective marks of 86, 82 and 80 per cent, also received honors.

All essays receiving a grade of 75 per cent or better are forwarded to the London headquarters of the society where they will be assessed by judges appointed to grade essays from all parts of the Commonwealth.

Coroner dispute flares

NANAIMO (CP) — Two Nanaimo coroners have resigned because Chief Coroner William MacArthur says he is considering preventing coroners who did not attend a recent provincial seminar from conducting inquests.

Doctors Michael Smart and Donald Shea, radiologists at Nanaimo General Hospital, quit after Smart learned he will not be allowed to hold inquests because he failed to attend the seminar.

Coroner seminars were held in January and March but both Shea and Smart said the mandatory nature of the seminars was unclear.

Of the 140 coroners in B.C., 128 attended. William Stanton of Parksville said that the 12 who did not can not hold inquests.

Shea said he met Monday with MacArthur and Stanton to discuss how the Nanaimo coroner's service will be covered now that Smart is unable to act.

But MacArthur said Tuesday he is only "considering steps for improving" the coroners service by limiting coroners who had not participated in the seminars to holding only preliminary hearings and inquiries.

As-twig-bent approach 'greens' young thumbs

hilda beastall

When family talk gets around to gardening as is likely to happen this weekend, a youngster may surprise you by wondering out loud why he or she can't have a garden, too.

Don't act too surprised, but do give instant approval to the idea. And don't say, "You can help me." Remember perhaps when you were young and might have developed an early interest in plants, if you had been allowed and encouraged to have a garden of your own.

Encouragement is the second half of beginning a project. The idea is the first half. Suggest one or two suitable spots where the new garden might be laid out, and let the child choose which. The soil should be already capable of being worked by the youngster's digging and raking, and the plants chosen should be able to grow with a little care.

There should be at least six hours of sunshine each day on the plot for flowers and vegetables. And the plot should be where it can be seen and admired by the family and by friends. We all get pleasure from having a bit of praise. It is motive for further effort.

Help in staking out the plot may be needed. You may have a number of small permanent plants which would make a border by a path. It may be pieces of iris roots or other flowering perennial, or a few clumps of chives to be divided and replanted. This is easy when you show the way.

Too many children's gardens have no permanent feature to carry over into the next year. I believe this lack of permanence accounts for lack of continuing interest. The garden should never be "finished" in the fall, especially in this climate. In earliest spring, it is the renewed growth of perennial plants that renews our enthusiasm; we love to see a tree or shrub growing larger and more beautiful each year.

So there should be at least one permanent feature in the youngster's garden, preferably of his or her own choice. With a bit of guidance as to what will look good in a year or two, let it be either a small flowering tree or an interesting flowering shrub which has already been seen and admired somewhere.

Suggest a notebook be kept, with dates of planting and sowing times, and the names of plants soon become familiar as the records are read and re-read. The book will be another personal possession to show with pride to anyone who shows interest. It might even be taken to school for a "talent project." Weather conditions might be noted or an important event occuring on the same day as certain garden work is done.

Seeds of vegetables chosen by the young gardener may be the first to be sown. And don't forget your child is as conscious of beauty as you are yourself. You may suggest a few quick-growing flowering annuals of favorite colors chosen from colored pictures and descriptions.

Guidance and assistance will be needed and accepted if you offer it as one gardener to another.

Be ready with praise for the effort put into the project, even the child spends only half an hour on it some days. Be slow with criticism; phrase it positively not in a negative fashion. Use words that are constructive in removing the fault, and that may even make use of what has been done to make something even more worthwhile. Not many of us like to tear down a morning's work without using some part for rebuilding.

Be genuine in your enthusiasm over the results, remembering that you and the rest of us each had to make a beginning, with gardening as well as with whatever other occupations we may have been involved in.

And gardening may only be the beginning of other interests which develop along the way, linked with the outdoors and things that grow. Some children learn best with competition, others on their own. Yours may surprise you.

Snowpack reads like bad fire year

Below-average snowpack readings which likely will result in drought conditions in several areas of B.C. this year could produce a serious forest fire situation, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Tuesday.

"We don't want to sound like alarmists, but we have to face the possibility of a serious forest fire situation," he said.

The forest protection season opens April 15. There will be 15 air tankers and eight bird-dog aircraft under contract during the peak period of the season.

The forests ministry also said that equipment used in locating lightning flashes likely to cause fires will be tested this year in the Kamloops forest region.

Electronic units located at three widely-separated points and connected to a computer in the regional office will plot lightning as it happens.

Last year, there were more than 3,800 forest fires in the province — the second highest number on record.

Metric timing stinks: Nielsen

The Liberal government's decision to revive the metric conversion program delayed by the Conservatives shows poor timing, Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen said Tuesday.

"But if bureaucracy wills that it be shall be imposed at a certain date, it shall be imposed at a certain date," he said.

He estimated that within 18 months, metric scales would be in use in food stores in 25 cities, serving 80 per cent of all Canadian consumers.

Nielsen said nobody really wants metric measurements. All they will do is serve bureaucratic interests and confuse people.

"In a situation where people aren't that happy about rising prices and the rest of it — I think it's just a further aggravation. It could be introduced perhaps at a different time when people are less angry about the marketplace."

The change to metric measurements is expected to cost a minimum of $3,000 for small stores and up to $50,000 for larger stores.

Ships in clear

HELSINKI (Reuter) — The last of 30 foreign ships trapped in ice off Finland's southern coast when icebreaker crews went on strike for better pay and conditions a week ago, has now pulled clear, navigation authorities said.

The poor get less, says MLA

Burnaby Edmonds NDP MLA Rosemary Brown has told the Victoria Council of Women the poor get the least from the provincial government.

The poor, including women either in low-paying jobs or supporting a family or elderly, received less than 30 per cent of the budget, she said.

"We punish them unfairly by leaving them to live in inadequate shelter, with inadequate health care, inadequate diet, in fact inadequate in every area of service. These are the people who can't fight back," Brown said.

"Women's organizations have to plead every year, on their knees, for what was promised more than 10 years ago following the Royal Commission on the Status of Women; comprehensive child care, pensions for women who choose to stay home, improved conditions for the elderly (mostly women). Yet we find ourselves still in a survival by starvation situation."

Brown said even programs that have been established may slip away.

She called on government to spend money for pensions, for access to community programs, for better sex education in schools, for part-time employment and for a guaranteed income for all.

VD causing epidemic of infertility in women

By CHARLES SEABROOK
Cox News Service

ATLANTA — Doctors at the U.S. Centre for Disease Control say they are seeing the first signs of a major infertility epidemic among women — largely the result of a tremendous upsurge in venereal disease rates during the mid-1960s and 1970s.

"There is no question that we are seeing the signs of an infertility epidemic," said James Curran, chief of the Operational Research Branch of the CDC's VD Control Division.

The infertility problems are caused by a condition known as pelvic inflammatory disease — or PID, an inflammation of a woman's Fallopian tubes. The Fallopian tubes are the pathways for the egg when it is released from the ovaries. Fertilization between an egg and sperm takes place in the tubes.

CDC doctors say that 40,000 to 50,000 women nationwide become infertile each year because of PID and that there are an estimated 54,000 surgical operations each year for PID and all its causes.

PID can leave the tubes scarred and diseased, obstructing the fertilization process and the normal passage of the egg. Many times, the organs are so damaged that doctors are forced to remove the tubes and related reproductive organs.

In a growing number of cases, the fertilized egg becomes stuck in the damaged tubes, and it is prevented from reaching the womb, where development of the fetus normally takes place. The fetus starts growing in the Fallopian tubes, a condition known as ectopic pregnancy.

Ectopic pregnancy can lead to the rupturing of the tubes and other serious problems, jeopardizing the life of the mother. Indeed, CDC doctors say that the problem has become a leading cause of maternal death in this country.

"I don't think people realize the seriousness of the PID problem in this country and around the world," said Ronald K. St. John, deputy director of the CDC's VD control division. "It is more widespread than we had thought."

That's why the CDC and other related health agencies have set up a major international conference on the problem. The meeting runs through Thursday at the CDC in Atlanta, and some 500 scientists from 52 nations have registered for it.

"PID also has reached epidemic proportions in Third World countries," said St. John. "That's why we have a lot of people coming from countries in Africa and Asia."

The disorder not only is causing sterility in large numbers, he added, it is also causing an untold amount of pain, menstrual disorders and other suffering.

Pelvic Inflammatory Disease mainly is a complication of gonorrhea and another type of VD known as non-specific gonoccal urethritis. "There are other problems associated with PID, but VD is the main cause," said St. John.

The bacteria that causes gonorrhea has been well studied. From 1965-75, gonorrhea rates in the U.S. have tripled, infecting millions of Americans.

The gonorrhea rate has leveled off since 1975, according to St. John, but the disease still occurs in epidemic proportions in the United States, still higher than its pre-1965 rate. The CDC projected that 1.010 million cases of gonorrhea occurred in 1979.

Now, non-specific gonoccal urethritis is threatening to become the leading venereal disease in the United States. Most of it is caused by a bacterium called Chlamydia, although other less-studied organisms also are responsible for a great number of cases.

The symptoms of non-specific gonoccal urethritis often resemble those of gonorrhea, and hence its name.

St. John said that 15 to 17 percent of all women who are infected by gonorrhea will develop PID. Of these, 10 percent will become infertile.

"It is estimated that PID is costing the nation about $600 million a year in health care costs. "But you can't put a value on human suffering," said Curran.

The PID problem, he pointed out, is not just limited to the United States. Other nations all over the world are experiencing just as serious a situation.

Kennedy licked, Brown out

MILWAUKEE (CP) — President Carter scored solid victories in the Wisconsin and Kansas primaries, dealing a dual blow to the nomination hopes of Senator Edward Kennedy and knocking California Gov. Jerry Brown out of the race.

Carter, bouncing back from rare defeats at the hands of Kennedy in the New York and Connecticut primaries, said through his spokesman that the victories in the Midwest gave him a strong boost toward the Democratic nomination.

But Kennedy's campaign manager, Stephen Smith, in conceding defeat in Tuesday's delegate-selecting contests, said the results were encouraging and the challenger has no intention of abandoning his campaign.

On the Republican side, as expected, Ronald Reagan won in both states. His challengers, Illinois Congressman John Anderson and former CIA director George Bush, appeared all but out of the race.

Reagan, a former California governor and film actor who now has won 10 of 12 primaries, said in Los Angeles that he is delighted with the results but it is still too early for him to claim a lock on the Republican nomination.

With 95 per cent of the vote counted in liberal-leaning Wisconsin, Carter led Kennedy by 56 to 30 per cent, with Brown taking 12 per cent.

In predominantly conservative Kansas, with all of the vote in, Carter led by a similar margin. He had 57 per cent to Kennedy's 32 per cent. Brown took five per cent.

Among the Republicans, Reagan had 40 per cent of the Wisconsin vote to 31 per cent for Bush and 28 per cent for Anderson.

In Kansas, Reagan led by an overwhelming margin. He had 63 per cent to 18 per cent for Anderson and 13 per cent for Bush, former ambassador to the United Nations and China.

Brown, who had campaigned vigorously in Wisconsin for more than three weeks, announced he was withdrawing from the presidential race but said he will continue to work to save the U.S. from depression and war.

The 41-year-old governor, who also ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination in 1976, would not say whether he intends to try for the White House a third time in 1984.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell said the president was especially pleased to rebound quickly from the defeats Kennedy handed him in New York and Connecticut last week.

Iranian signals 'confusing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief spokesman, acknowledging the Iranian government is dissatisfied with Carter's latest statement on the hostage crisis, said today "we're still getting conflicting signals" from Tehran.

Press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that "we're trying to determine what the position of the Iranian leaders is." He cited what he termed "conflicting signals on the public record" but did not elaborate.

There was no immediate White House comment on reports that the Carter administration had sent a new private message to Iranian government officials Tuesday night.

A White House official said UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim talked by telephone Tuesday with Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and then told U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance the Iranian leader was not satisfied with a statement Carter made to reporters early Tuesday morning.

In those remarks, Carter said he was delaying imposition of any new sanctions against Iran in response to a conditional public promise by Bani-Sadr to wrest control of the hostages from the Islamic militants holding the U.S. embassy in Tehran. Carter called that promise a "positive development."

But Carter made no specific response to the conditions outlined by Bani-Sadr: that his government would assume responsibility for the hostages only after the United States issued an official statement agreeing to initiate no hostilities or propaganda against Iran.

In fact, Carter repeatedly turned aside reporters' questions on whether he intended to meet those conditions.

Carter acknowledged he had no guarantee Bani-Sadr would deliver on his promise to place the hostages under Iranian government control if certain conditions were met.

At a mid-day speech before a conference of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, the president said emphatically that no one in the United States has apologized to Iran for any action during the reign of the deposed shah.

Carter also said the United States has not and will not condone or express any approval of the seizure of the hostages by the militants, and he warned that U.S. patience was thin.

Husband on probation

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A husband who stabbed a naked man he found hiding behind the door of his wife's bedroom was put on probation for two years. The Melbourne criminal court was told that the parties had reached an understanding and now are living in one house.

Diving record hailed

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Three researchers today set a new endurance record by spending four weeks in a special pressure chamber that simulated an underwater depth of 2,132 feet.

The experiment, conducted at the Duke University Medical Center, was expected to have great signifance for the deep sea diving industry, researchers said.

Medical center assistants greeted Stephen Porter of Cortex, Colo.; William Bell of New Bern, N.C., a medical student, and Delmar "Bud" Shelton with cake and champagne when they left the 10-foot-high, 6-foot-diameter cylindrical chamber after a 28-day "dive." The test began March 6.

Dr. Peter B. Bennett, director of the center's environmental laboratory, said the good condition of the researchers proves man can go to great depths without suffering what is called "high-pressure nervous syndrome."

The syndrome strikes people who go below the depth of 1,000 feet. They suffer nausea, tremors and some mental lapses. Bennett said he corrected that by having the three breathe a mix of air that included oxygen and helium and 10 per cent nitrogen.

San Salvador uneasy as violence continues

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Leftists shot up the Guatemalan ambassador's car but did not kill him and set off bombs in the U.S.-Salvador Cultural Centre. Meanwhile, two Dutch TV reporters were shot and slightly wounded by men they described as soldiers.

The leftists fired 12 bullets into the ambassador's car as they passed the Guatemalan embassy in a pick-up truck Tuesday. None of the bullets hit Ambassador Carlos Lemus Gallardo or his chauffeur, but they broke the car's windows, injuring the envoy with flying glass.

It was the third attempt to kill Lemus Gallardo in the last three years. Authorities blamed the latest try, and the others, on leftists who oppose Guatemala's government because it supports El Salvador's junta.

The U.S.-Salvador Cultural Centre was invaded by 15 masked youths armed with automatic weapons. They set off three bombs, causing minor damage and no injuries to the centre's secretary, the only employee present.

The Dutch reporters, part of the foreign press corps covering the latest round of violence in El Salvador following the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero March 23, said they were shot by two men in olive drab shirts resembling those worn by the national guard.

One of the reporters, Frank Dyanmond, was hit twice in the back but doctors said he was hit by bullet fragments.

What you should know about buying a TV

What is convergence?

This is a term used when describing picture quality. A color picture tube is made up of red, green and blue images which should be exactly superimposed on each other in all parts of the picture. If the set is properly adjusted, there should be no colored outlines near the centre of the picture, even though there may be some mis-convergence at the corners and edges of the picture.

Olympic boycott crumbling

Decision within month if Canada to compete

Times News Services

There are growing signs that plans for a worldwide boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games are crumbling and the United States could be the only major sporting power absent when the Olympic flame is lit July 19.

A survey by United Press International of political and sporting attitudes among the most important countries showed Tuesday that none was at the point of joining a boycott.

And for the first time there were indications that American public opinion, originally solid in support of President Jimmy Carter's boycott call, was cooling to the idea.

Several countries have rallied to Carter's call, but major Western powers including Canada, West Germany, France, Britain, Japan and Australia are either starting to lean away from a boycott or simply unable to force their athletes to stay away.

Canadian External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said Tuesday the federal government will make its final decision before the end of this month.

Following a meeting with Sports Minister Gerald Regan and Dick Pound of the Canadian Olympic Assocition, MacGuigan said the sports body has left the ultimate decision in the hands of the government.

"We are only interested in participating in a boycott if that can drastically counter the affects of the naked Soviet agression in Afghanistan," Regan said.

Pound said that if the government found enough support from other participating Western nations that favored a boycott and decided to bar Canadian athletes from competing, his group would reconsider its stand and make its final decision at its next general meeting in Montreal April 27.

The COA's chief source of funding, the Olympic Trust of Canada, is still undecided about what it will do but at a meeting Tuesday night in Toronto indicated it would follow the government line.

"If the government told the COA 'You don't go,' and if the general public's opinion was, 'You don't go,' then it would be difficult for us to spend these funds ($1.6 million) on sending an Olympic team to Moscow," said Olympic Trust president Wally Halder.

The board of directors of Olympic Trust Tuesday reconfirmed its position of March 26 — that it is opposed to sending a team "under present international circumstances."

There are three main factors in the boycott movement's international erosion:

—Growing opposition among athletes;

—The virtual collapse of plans for so-called alternative games;

—Last week's crucial decision by the British Olympic Association to defy the government and send a team to Moscow. That decision could prove a turning point.

Shortly after it was made, the Norwegian Olympic Committee reversed its previous position and voted narrowly to go.

In the U.S. itself, the first signs of a swing away from Carter's position came when the U.S. Olympic Committee disclosed Monday that 80 per cent of letters and telegrams it was receiving now opposed a boycott.

USOC sources also said that at a private meeting last weekend in Colorado Springs, Colo., 20 of the 21 U.S. summer Olympic sports federations spoke in favor of going to Moscow. Only diving officials voted against.

Nevertheless, U.S. political analysts believe Carter cannot change his boycott stance now and the White House has given no indication that a change is likely.

Although the U.S. has the support of "minor," Western-oriented countries such as Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Malaysia and Djibouti, the majority of the big powers are waiting until as close as possible to the May 24 deadline for acceptance of invitations.

Most nations are looking to West Germany for a lead and it seems Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's attitude is likely to play the key role.

West Germany is in an election year and Schmidt's decisions may be governed as much by domestic political considerations as by international diplomatic ones.

Prince carries on vision

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Prince Charles said today he's determined to carry on the United World Colleges vision established by his uncle, the late Lord Louis Mountbatten.

The prince, who took over as international president of UWC several years ago, said in a brief speech at the Lester Pearson College of the Pacific:

"Lord Mountbatten told me he wanted to be remembered for what he'd done to establish a global force for peace, which was his great ambition.

"I am determined to carry on the vision he established," Prince Charles said in a short opening speech to UWC delegates gathered from around the world.

Prince Charles also announced that a memorial trust fund set up in the UK in Lord Mountbatten's name will be used to encourage and support the concept of UWC.

He said the fund would mainly be used for scholarships to the colleges but said it would also be used to encourage technological research for help for the handicapped.

The prince seemed relaxed and rested as he staged a walkabout and talked to students about at the college before the meeting.

He told them about his feeling that the concept of the UWC organization was one way to promote a greater international understanding.

During his stroll through the campus he talked with one of the first Chinese students admitted to the college.

Postal strike looming

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office has rejected all non-wage monetary proposals from the postal workers' union and a union official in Saskatchewan has warned that a national strike is imminent.

The rejections are contained in a post office document listing initial response of government negotiators to proposals by the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Pat Davies, president of the Saskatoon local of the Canadian Union of Postal workers, said Tuesday it is just a matter of time before a strike is called.

She said people seem to be prepared for a strike and consider it the obvious outcome of the current contract dispute.

The union proposals include an increase in overtime pay to double time from time and a half, in meal allowance to $7.50 from $4, in work relocation bonuses to $1,000 from a maximum $300 and in night work premiums to a percentage of top pay rates instead of the current flat 40 cents an hour.

Among the non-wage proposals rejected by the post office are creation of a dental-optical-hearing plan, compensation for unused sick leave, establishment of a supplementary pension fund, payment of penalties for delayed wages and granting a 20-week paid maternity leave. Postal workers now have six-month unpaid maternity leave.

In most of these cases, the post office said the proposals are unjustified, that existing benefits are generous enough and compare favorably with those received by other workers inside and outside the public service.

Bank rate jumps in Ottawa as U.S. loan rate hits 20%

Times News Services

Interest rates in Canada and the U.S. soared again today as the Bank of Canada rate hit a record high of 16.20 per cent and two U.S. banks raised rates to 20 per cent to adjust for the rising costs of their funds.

The Bank of Canada increase, the fourth in a row since the bank moved to a floating rate in early March, is 0.71 of one per cent, the largest increase to date.

The rate, pegged one-quarter of one per cent above the average interest paid at the weekly auction of 91-day treasury bills, moved higher as the bank tried to catch up to U.S. prime interest rates.

The new bank lending rate, charged on infrequent loans to chartered banks, likely heralds another round of increases for mortgage rates and business loans.

The chartered bank prime lending rate, charged to the most creditworthy business customers, currently stands at 16.5 per cent while the cost of one-year mortgages charged by some lenders moved to 16 per cent this week from 15.5 per cent.

In New York, the Chemical Bank, the sixth largest bank in the U.S., boosted the rate to 20 per cent, leapfrogging past the 19¾ per cent rate set Tuesday by Chase Manhattan Bank. Chemical, based in New York, had been charging 19½ per cent, a rate it adopted only Friday.

A month ago, the U.S. prime stood at 16¾ per cent.

The 20-per-cent rate was promptly matched by First National Bank of Chicago, the ninth-largest bank.

Despite the recent steep increases in the U.S. prime rate, credit demand has been heavy. Figures released by the Federal Reserve Board last Friday showed commercial and industrial loans on the books of large banks in the U.S. jumped $818 million in the week ended last Wednesday. That followed a $1.4-billion surge the previous week.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, the finance department announced the government used $300 million (U.S.) under a stand-by credit arrangement with Canadian chartered banks and $729.9 million in U.S. dollar reserves in a major move to slow a sharp drop in the currency's value last month.

The government's heavy use of U.S. dollars to buy Canadian currency came as the dollar in U.S. terms fell dramatically to 83.6 cents from 87.3 cents during March.

Liquor, wine prices up

The Liquor Distribution Branch has changed the prices on 155 products — 128 of them upwards.

The stiffest was a $3.55 boost in the cost of Hudson's Bay rye whisky to $15.75 a bottle.

International currency fluctuations and increased costs charged by suppliers were cited as reasons.

Other changes included: eight brands of Scotch whisky boosted by 20 to 55 cents; 64 domestic wines were upped by 10 to 70 cents.

In the imported wines, 35 were up by 10 to 70 cents, while 14 decreased by five to 35 cents.

Other changes were recorded in brandies (three brands up, two down), liqueurs (three up, four down) and unlisted and special varieties.

'Poison Gang' suspect eyed

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — The "Poison Gang" extortionist who has threatened to place more poisoned foods in Safeway supermarkets unless he is paid 100 diamonds has struck a third store and fled a drop site that had been staked out by authorities, it was reported today.

Meanwhile, the Riverside Press Enterprise said Riverside County Sheriff's deputies identified a suspect as Richard Quincy Williams, 46, of Winchester, who was acquitted in a similar extortion scheme in Sun City in Riverside County last May.

Authorities staked out Williams' home in Orange County near Santa Ana, but he was not there, the report said.

The "Poison Gang" extortionist previously laced jars of pickles and teriyaki sauce with lethal doses of cyanide at two Safeway markets in San Diego last Saturday and Sunday.

The latest target of the extortionist was a Safeway market in Palm Desert near Palm Springs, the newspaper said.

A man telephoned the store Monday afternoon and told an employee he was the same man who had poisoned food in the San Diego markets. He directed the employee to a bottle of salad dressing he said had been poisoned.

The newspaper said the extortionist demanded that the employee gather a large amount of diamonds and cash and meet him.

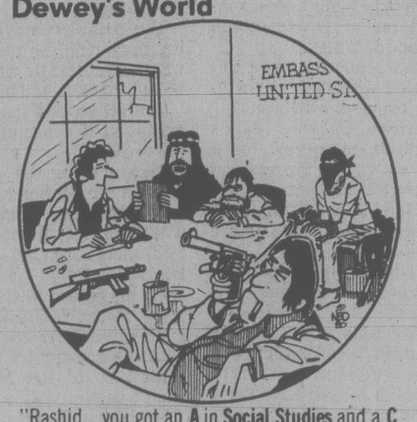

Safeway met the extortionist's demands and FBI agents staked out the site before the drop. The extortionist arrived at the site, but fled without the money, the newspaper said.

In last May's extortion plot, a man demanded $50,000 in cash and in a series of telephone calls increased the amount to $150,000. Investigators found a cyanide-tainted box of cornflakes marked with two Xs and a Valencia orange that had been injected with cyanide.

Williams was arrested in that case and stood trial, but the jury found him innocent.

In San Diego, all markets of the Safeway chain were operating normally Tuesday.

Visit the stars

The Victoria Times and VI*90 on Thursday will begin awarding double passes to a movie as part of the annual Visit the Stars Academy Award contest.

The movie will be for the 7 p.m. April 16 showing of Little Miss Marker, a family comedy, at the Odeon.

There will be 150 double passes awarded in a daily drawing from among early entrants in the contest.

Already more than 2,000 entries have been received.

The double passes will be mailed directly to winners as soon as the draw has been made.

Besides seeing the film, the winners of the double passes will watch the drawing for the grand prize, a trip for two to Hollywood via CP Air with weekend accommodations, plus five runner-up prizes, consisting of a dinner for two at The Empress and a double pass to a movie.

It first came out in 1934, when it starred Shirley Temple. Later it was called Sorrowful Jones and starred Bob Hope and Lucille Ball.

The latest version, to be shown April 16, has an all-star cast, including Tony Curtis, Bob Newhart, Julie Andrews, Walter Matthau and featuring Sarah Stimpson as Little Miss Marker.

Call of the home town

Drifters? Not that many

By AL FORREST

Don't dismiss that young, long-haired newcomer as a drifter.

He might have been born here.

The study shows that of 162 newcomers registering for work at the CEC in February:

— About 27 per cent were coming home to Victoria after having worked in some other city.

— Another 23 per cent were the wife or husband of someone who had recently been transferred here.

— Another six per cent were students or semi-retired people looking for part-time work.

— And only nine per cent could be described as transients, people who conducted only a brief job search here before moving on.

"We found most of the newcomers had some roots in Victoria, one way or another," said Rod Wikkramatileke, 27, who conducted the survey for the CEC.

About 60 per cent of them had visited or lived in Victoria before their latest job-hunting excursion here.

About 20 per cent had lived here for three or more years.

About 11 per cent had found work within the first two weeks of their arrival. Another 76 per cent were still looking while the remaining 11 per cent had given up.

All of them expressed a strong preferance for staying in Victoria.

And 48 per cent said they had no intention of looking for work outside the city, even up-Island.

The climate and scenery of the capital remains a strong lure.

Most of the new arrivals were young, between 16 and 30, and more than half were male.

The survey was conducted at the request of local CEC manager Wally Pickering, who wondered what becomes of the newcomers and where they live.

The survey showed that 40 per cent were staying with relatives, often parents, while 14 per cent were boarding with friends.

Another 28 per cent had found rental accommodation while eight per cent were forced into hotel rooms.

A surprisingly high 10 per cent had already bought homes.

All of them indicated it was difficult to find rental accommodation anywhere in the region.

Pickering said it is a wonder they had been able to find any apartment space at all because the vacancy rate is almost nil.

The survey will give the CEC valuable background information to help newcomers with their needs, he said.

He had become concerned because of the large numbers arriving from out-of-town this year. As many as 41 per cent of the job-seekers registering at the CEC office each month would be recent arrivals to the city.

One problem the survey uncovered. Many people leave only mailing addresses when they register for work, especially if they have just arrived.

Often they don't know the number or don't have access to their own phone.

An employer usually intends to fill a vacancy within 24 hours and there is no time to advise people by mail.

There were 283 newcomers who registered at the Canada Employment Centre in February but the survey covered only 162 of them.

The other 121 could not be contacted for various reasons, including the fact many did not leave a phone number.

In some cases they had moved out of a hotel without leaving a forwarding address.

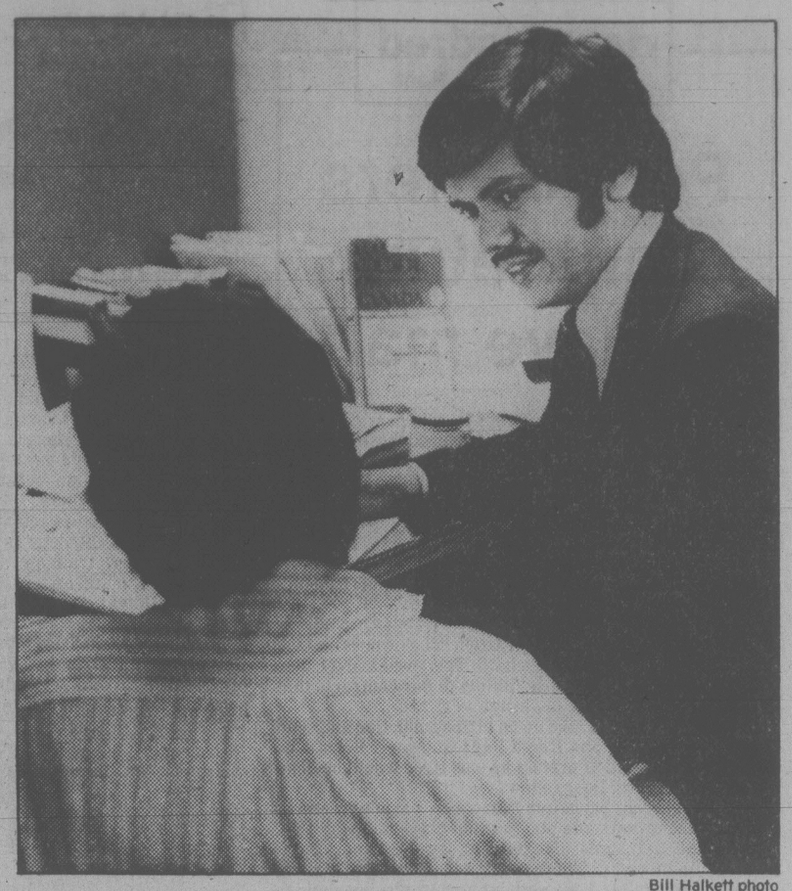

In other cases they did not respond to phone calls.

"We don't know if these people were not answering because they were at work or because they had left town. We can't draw any conclusions on that group because we have no data."

A follow-up study will be conducted in an effort to trace this latter group.

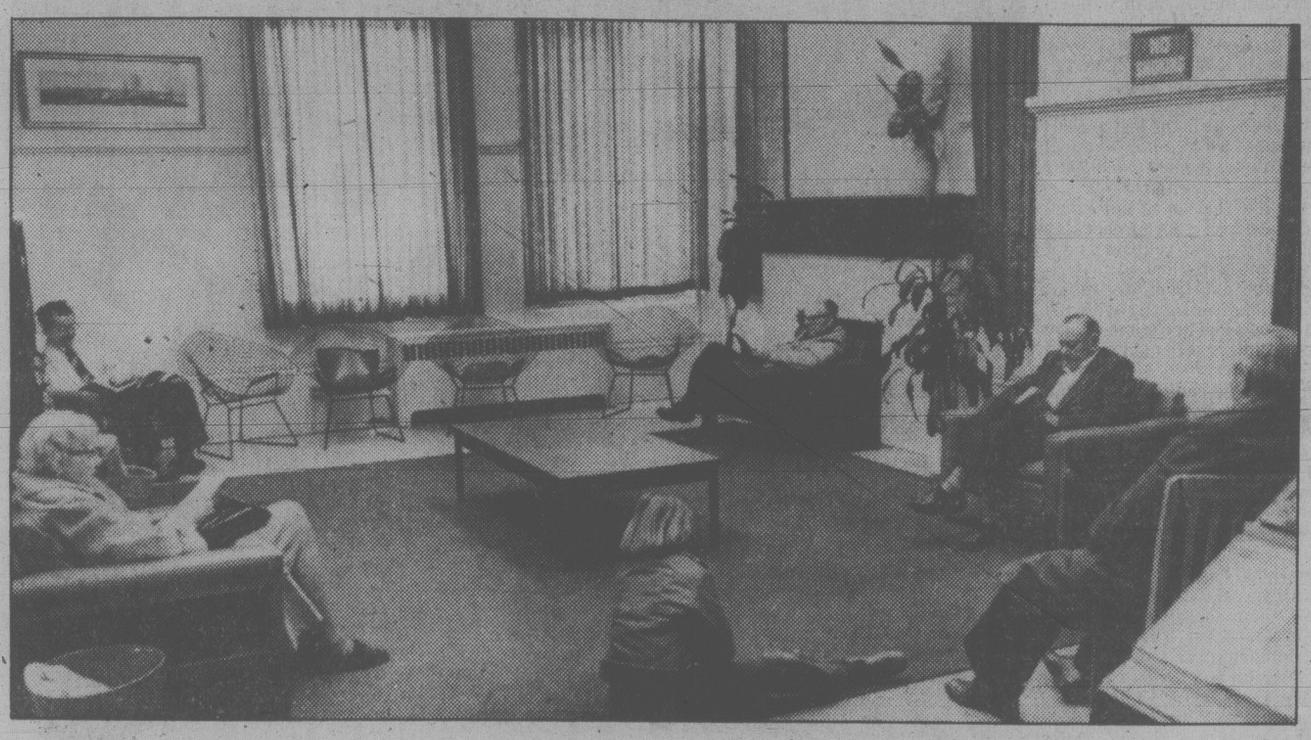

Through the CEC computer, a search will be conducted to see if they have registered at any other CEC office in the province.

"A few of them may have turned out to be drifters while others are probably still in the district somewhere."

Rod Wikkramatileke: 'Most have some roots in Victoria'

No sad ending to this story

By NORMAN GIDNEY

After 77 years at the same corner of Yates and Douglas, the Victoria downtown public library is moving to spacious quarters in a new government office building.

And despite Victoria's reputation as a haven of nostalgia and heritage buffs, most people who work there and the patrons who borrow books seem glad to be going.

The old Carnegie bulding which was built in 1903 and the 30-year-old annex behind it close at 6 tonight, considerably the worse for wear. Four generations of Victorians have worn down the stone steps carrying books in and out.

"In a way I'm very pleased," said Marjorie Blair, interviewed at the library while she browsed the paperback racks.

A Victoria rsident for eight years, she's in the library every week.

But she has no sentimental attachment to the old building and looks forward to using the new library.

Bruce Evans, the library's head of programs and services and the man who is supervising the move, is another who hasn't experienced a flood of nostalgic feelings.

"We haven't had time to feel sentimental," he said.

The work of packing 13,200 cardboard boxes with the library's collection of 200,000 books and more periodicals (propped upright as on a shelf they'd stretch in a straight line all the way out to Royal Oak) has kept everybody busy flat out for some time.

"We're organized like a military campaign," said Helen MacKay, head of the reference department. "It's like a field operation."

Many of the staff have "risen above the call of duty," according to reference librarian Joe Girard. There have been organizational meetings at lunch hour and others have been planning different aspects of the move at home.

"For most of us it's fairly exciting."

The library staff are in charge of packing and unpacking so they can organize the collection as it comes out of the boxes at the new library.

In exactly four weeks, the 50 staff will open the doors to the public at their new library in the shiny glass and brick Waddington building in the 700-block Broughton.

Like the modern structure itself, the library's agreement to use the space is up to the minute. Its two floors in the Waddington are rented from the province something like a condominium. The library will pay $400,000 a year rent but after 10 years it has the option to buy the space on a strata title basis.

Up on the fourth floor in technical services which buys all the new books and repairs the old, one staffer wondered with a laugh if their mascots, seagulls George and Sheba, would find their way to the new library four blocks south for their daily handouts.

Mortgage crusader here April 12

Viv Woolford, the Mississauga man responsible for a cross-Canada crusade against spiralling mortgage interest rates, will be the keynote speaker at a noon rally on the grounds of the Legislative Buildings on Saturday, April 12.

The former car salesman who quit his job to devote his time to the cause, had a rally in Mississauga on Sunday.

His West Coast visit to Victoria and Vancouver will launch a cross-country blitz, culminating in an Ottawa appearance in late April or early May.

Woolford says more than 300,000 have backed his call on the federal government to peg first mortgage rates at between 10 and 12 per cent.

He's shooting for two million names before he reaches Ottawa.

She said radio stations and television networks have bombarded her with requests for details of Woolford's visit.

She had hoped to have posters advertising the event, but although a printer has offered to do the printing free, she still has to pay for the paper.

WOOLFORD
. . . noon rally

She checked into the postage costs of mailing an advertisement about the rally and discovered she simply couldn't handle the costs.

She hopes Victorians will turn out in droves to hear Woolford.

She already has petitions with more than 1,000 signatures, and there are dozens of petitions still out around Greater Victoria.

She thinks renters should take an interest in the crusade as mortgage rates have a direct effect on the rents they're paying.

$392,000 aid for UVic jobs

The provincial labor ministry has approved $392,000 for this summer's Youth Employment Program at the University of Victoria.

And while the amount is $7,000 up from last year, it still is less than half the $860,000 sought by UVic.

The YEP funds will provide 125 student jobs in 96 projects between May 1 and Aug. 29.

Ted Sawchuck, director of student and ancilliary services, said he's pleased with the government help but disappointed at the low level of wages offered in the program.

Fisrt and second-year students will earn $650 a month, those with more than two years will get $700 and those in post-graduate studies $755.

Sawchuck said he doesn't know how a student can be expected to save any money to come back to university on such salaries.

Pickets hit credit union

Employee-management sparks are flying again at the Sidney branch of the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union.

About eight employees picketed the office Tuesday and were out again today to protest the three-day suspension of head teller Judy Sayers.

The employees, about half of the total branch staff, claim they are being harassed and intimidated in their efforts to win a first contract.

Last month the Office and Technical Employees Union was granted certification as the bargaining agent for the employees after a long and sometime bitter campaign.

Sayers said today the company has appealed to the Labor Relations Board to reconsider the certification decision and in the meantime is "trying to break us down."

Company spokesmen were not available for comment this morning.

Sayers said the company's reasons for suspending her included the charge that she was handing out work unfairly to the tellers and that she has a hostile attitude towards her work.

It's Cep-ted for Saanich police

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Saanich police chief Bob Peterson has accepted a challenge from Mayor Mel Couvelier to change the police force's image in line with needs for the 80s.

At a press conference this morning Peterson unveiled his plan, a concept called crime prevention through environmental design — Cep-ted for short.

Peterson said the concept was developed about five years ago in the U.S.

Saanich is the first Canadian force to propose it as a strategy in fighting crime.

Peterson said the approach will give police a bigger say in the management of the environment with the view to making the municipality a safer place for residents.

He said, however, its success will hinge on how much the community is prepared to assume a share of the responsibility.

Last week Couvelier told 60 senior police and justice officials at a crime prevention seminar at The Empress that policing styles must alter to keep pace with a changing society.

The two-day seminar examined Cep-ted as an answer to some of the problems.

Peterson said Cep-ted is like other crime prevention programs such as Neighborhood Watch but concentrates more on the general environment where crime occurs.

Its aim is not only to reduce the opportunity for crime but also the factors that give rise to crime.

Police would have a say in building designs, approving residential and commercial building developments and adjusting pedestrian and vehicle traffic patterns to cut crime.

Peterson said as an example that it would be unwise to have a large shopping centre located near a high school, a residence for the elderly next door to a playground, a fast-food outlet next to a liquor store or an all-night convenience store in an isolated area apart from anything else.

"Such developments only invite trouble," he said.

Peterson said police don't want control over developments.

"Our role as I see it is to act as stimulators, to bring possible problems to the attention of officials."

At present there is no mechanism for police to review developments at an early stage.

Peterson said the ultimate goal is to instil in residents a sense of belonging.

"The design is centred around the idea of territoriality," he said. "It means not only taking care of your own property but also those around you."

He said incentives, such as preferred insurance premiums or tax benefits, could be created to encourage residents to follow good design features and crime prevention practices.

"I can't promise Cep-ted would deliver," he said.

"The police can't do it alone. What we can only do is intervene at an early point and hopefully prevent an atmosphere which spawns crime from developing."

Meanwhile, the seminar planning committee which arranged last week's Cep-ted seminar will met again at the end of the month to plan its next move.

The committee comprises senior police and crime prevention officers from Victoria and the Lower Mainland as well as representatives from the federal solicitor-general's department and provincial attorney-general ministry and a criminologist from Simon Fraser University.

Unable to go a'wooing, frog croaks meowing

Gordon Grovestine, a lab technician at the University of Prince Edward Island, said cause of death is unknown and the body is being kept frozen for the time being.

However a student said "maybe he croaked of a broken heart" because the frog was kept in captivity without a mate.

The two-pound southern bullfrog gained renown across North America because of its ability to make a "meowing" rather than "croaking" sound.

Hop Sing became an international celebrity with the university receiving calls from radio stations and newspapers throughout North America about him.

He was dubbed Hop Sing by students who hoped the name would not offend people of oriental extraction.

Ottawa launches 'no' ad campaign

MONTREAL (CP) — Ottawa may spend $400,000 or more to advertise the advantages of federalism to Quebec in the period leading up to the spring referendum.

The government has launched a $150,000, two-week newspaper campaign urging Quebecers to write in for booklets on federalism and may extend it to the end of April — for another $150,000 — if the response is good.

A spokesman for the Canadian Unity Information Office in Ottawa said Tuesday the government will also buy radio spots on the same subjects and there is a possibility of still more advertising.

The unity office is also continuing to send pro-federalist exhibits, centring on government services and Canada's energy wealth, to Quebec communities at a cost of $9,200 a week.

The spokesman said the exhibits will go on "for many, many months to come" while the advertising campaign "probably won't go beyond April."

But even so, one or both might run into trouble with Quebec's referendum law.

The law requires virtually all referendum spending to be channelled through umbrella committees running the yes and the no campaigns and limits expenses to $2.1 million for each side. The restrictions apply once Premier Rene Levesque announces the referendum date.

The unity office spokesman said any conflict "would be something that would have to be dealt with if it ever arises." She said the government's opinion is that federalist booklets that have already been published do not need to be counted as an official expense of the no campaign.

She isn't aware, however, of any legal opinion on whether the ads themselves might violate the law if they are not registered as official expenses.

The advertising covers four subjects: the billions of dollars in equalization payments from Ottawa to the provinces; how federalism helps the important Quebec textile industry; trade; and federalism generally.

The latter theme appeared Sunday. Entitled "we are two billion," it lists other federal states in the world and says how popular it is as a form of government. It notes the United States, the Soviet Union, Austria, Australia and Brazil are among those countries with a federal system.

Meanwhile the Quebec Assembly adjourned Tuesday night for a week-long Easter holiday but when it reconvenes April 9, Quebecers will learn the exact date of the referendum.

Although it reconvenes April 9, the referendum date will probably be determined the next day at a cabinet meeting.

Spokesmen for Premier Rene Levesque's office said he will be "taking in the sun" during the Easter holidays. They would not specify where Levesque will be. Opposition leader Claude Ryan will take about three days off and continue his campaigning for the "no" vote.

According to Bill 92, the law laying the groundrules for the referendum, campaigning can last from 35 and 60 days.

Pepin pressed for Rupert port

EDMONTON (CP) — Western grain companies will press the new Liberal government to fulfil what they say is a federal commitment to help finance the proposed grain terminal at Prince Rupert.

Allan Macpherson, president of the Alberta Wheat Pool, said Tuesday he and other representatives of the Prince Rupert grain and coal consortium, will meet Thursday in Regina with Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin to try to convince him to fulfil a commitment made by his Progressive Conservative predecessor, Don Mazankowski.

The commitment calls on Ottawa to pay up to $42.5 million toward site development costs at the Prince Rupert terminal without charging the consortium for most of the work.

But Pepin has said he wants to renegotiate the financial arrangements of the deal so the federal government can, in effect, charge for some of the work.
